- Hope (Ark.) Star Photo

This is the machine which made the negative separations that produced today's process color photographs. It is the second Berkey color separator sold to an American newspaper— and first of the largest model size, 8x10 - inch.

Gathered around the Berkey— which is a giant photographic enlarger governed by a push-button computer— are the Hope Star staffers now in training to operate it:

Standing: Gene Allen, cameraman and No. 2 pressman, left; and Billy Dan Jones, mechanical superintendent and head pressman; and, seated, Alex. H. Washburn, editor and publisher, for 30 years a newspaper cameraman and darkroom technician.

Specialty Cars Rate Praise

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Leo Beebe, the swinging general marketing manager for Lincoln-Mercury who had a lot to do with Ford's strong interest in racing, may have put his finger on what ails the industry this year.

"We need," he said in a Detroit speech, "something exciting in the auto business to offset our preoccupation with safety, smog and declining sales."

He pointed out that the excitement of the specialty cars may be attributable to the fact that the industry's bread-and-butter cars "tend to look so much alike."

As an example he told the story of the couple in front of the theater waiting for their Eldorado to be driven around. Finally, the wife tugged at her husband's arm, saying "There's our Eldorado."

It turned out to be a Chevrolet. His point was that specialty cars, such as Mustang, Camaro, Barracuda, Firebird and Cougar, were helping to rekindle the American love affair with the automobile. "They are proving," Beebe said, "that the automobile can still be glamorous."

Could be. Specialty car sales are up but certainly not enough to offset the general decline in sales this year. Naturally, automakers had to find something to blame for the dip and the scapegoats are Ralph Nader and federal safety standards. That's the easy way out, we think.

Yet cars are still making news. Here's what's going on:

Shelby-American, which intended to produce 3,000 GT-350 Mustangs, has increased its 1967 model run to 4,500 and with it has extended warranty to 12 months or 12,000 miles from the original 90-day or 4,000 miles. . . . Car buffs had their chance to buy a car-making company the other day, lock, stock and barrel. The Cord Automobile Co. of Tulsa, Okla., went on the auction block for considerably less than a million bucks.

Flat is introducing a new sports car to Americans at the International Auto Show in New York next month. It's called the 850 Spider, a two-seater, rear-engined convertible with a four-cylinder, aluminum head engine. . . .

Mustang is the best-looking American car, according to a national survey of teenagers, but most of the youngsters want their parents to buy a Chevy. The survey was conducted by the Young Catholic Messenger magazine. . . . American Motors has taken on Volkswagen. Although prices vary throughout the country, AMC's Rambler can often be purchased for some dollars under the VW tag. A Chicago survey found AMC dealers willing to take as little as $50 above cost to compete with VW and a few are advertising the Rambler 220 for $1,695. One dealer reported he has been "doing nothing but selling cars" since the price cut. . . .

An Italian firm is building an electric car to sell for about $710. Called the Urbanina (which means city car), it will be equipped with a 24-volt, 100-amp engine and is said to have a range of more than seven hours. . . .

Amateur motor racers will be interested in a new breed of single-seat racers being built by Ford of England. Tagged the Formula Ford, it's based on components of Ford's Cortina sedan and is expected to sell for less than $2,800. The cars will appear on Britain's racing circuits this year. . . . The 1967 Mobile Economy Run starts in Los Angeles on April 4 and ends, appropriately enough, in Detroit on April 9. That's 3,000 miles, with the route winding from a few feet above sea level to heights of more than 11,000 feet. . . .

A group of strolling players is making the rounds of high schools selling safety with songs and humor. By the end of the school year, some two million students will have seen "Music for Young Americans," featuring the Spurlows. Sponsored by Chrysler, the group travels in a Dodge diesel truck, four station wagons, a Plymouth convertible and a Dodge Charger. They make the safety point in a light, entertaining way. . . .

NASCAR king Bill France has announced plans to build a 2.5-mile superspeedway near Talladega, Ala. He figures the circuit, to be opened in the spring of 1969, will cost $3.5 million, excluding land. . . . Expect Toyota, Japan's largest automaker, to make even greater inroads in the U.S. market during the next few years. Toyota, in the last year, jumped from 12th place in import-car sales to fifth, largely because of its dandy little machine, the Toyota Corona. It's one of the biggest-selling import cars on the West Coast now and the pitch for the East is under way.

The newest James Bond film, soon-to-be-released, features the firm's 2000GT sports car which will be shown at the New York Auto Show. . . .

Mailing Morale Costs Money

By TOM TIEDE
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

FORT LEE, N.J.—(NEA)—Every evening Linda Galoardi, age 20, of this city, writes several pages of airmail letters to Pvt. John Riley, age 22, at Ti Anh, Viet Nam.

Each letter costs her eight cents.

Frequently she wraps up four or five pound packages—oatmeal cookies, small cakes, sourmilk donuts—and sends them to her infantry-enlisted boy friend.

They cost her "about $5" apiece.

If she sends 365 such letters in the coming year and two such packages a month—which she insists she will—she will spend nearly $150 on postage alone to mail morale to Pvt. Riley during his 12-month tour of the war.

"Gee," she observes, "it's expensive."

With countless Americans now sending thousands of pounds of mail every day to soldiers in Southeast Asia (some 5,000 more tons are expected before Christmas) the total tab for statesiders is millions of dollars.

Because of this cost, many families must keep mail to GI relatives at a minimum. And a few people—say the wife of a Pvt. E-2 earning $97.50 a month—cannot afford any packages whatsoever.

Linda Galoardi thinks it's a shame. "So," she says, "some of my friends and I have gotten together a petition in northern New Jersey. It asks that some kind of legislation be passed in Washington to eliminate the postage on mail being sent to servicemen in the war. The signatures and enthusiasm generated have been encouraging."

Signatures?

"More than 2,000 of them so far."

Enthusiasm?

"Even the post office people are signing," she giggles.

The petition argues that no warfront soldier should be kept from maximum homefront mail because of economic reasons. It also implies that, since the United States is now spending $2 billion a month toward increasing the machinery to wage the war, it can also afford some money toward increasing the morale to wage it.

From time to time similar petitions have circulated throughout the country. Unfortunately for the campaigners, none has ever raised dust. So it has been with any conceived legislation on the subject.

Rep. Dominick Daniels (D-N.J.), for example, placed a bill (HR 13071) before the House last February. His aides say, frankly, "It got nowhere fast."

Daniels' proposal, which would eliminate postal charges on first-class letters and parcels (five pounds or less) not exceeding 60 inches in length and girth, "hasn't a chance this session," his office says. "We're not optimistic about next session, either."

The trouble is, according to representatives of the House Post Office Committee, there has been no popular backing for such a law.

"This kind of minor legislation," says one House aide, "must have the support of many large groups. As of now it appears nobody cares one way or the other."

Except Linda Galoardi, of course.

"I intend to keep harping," she says.

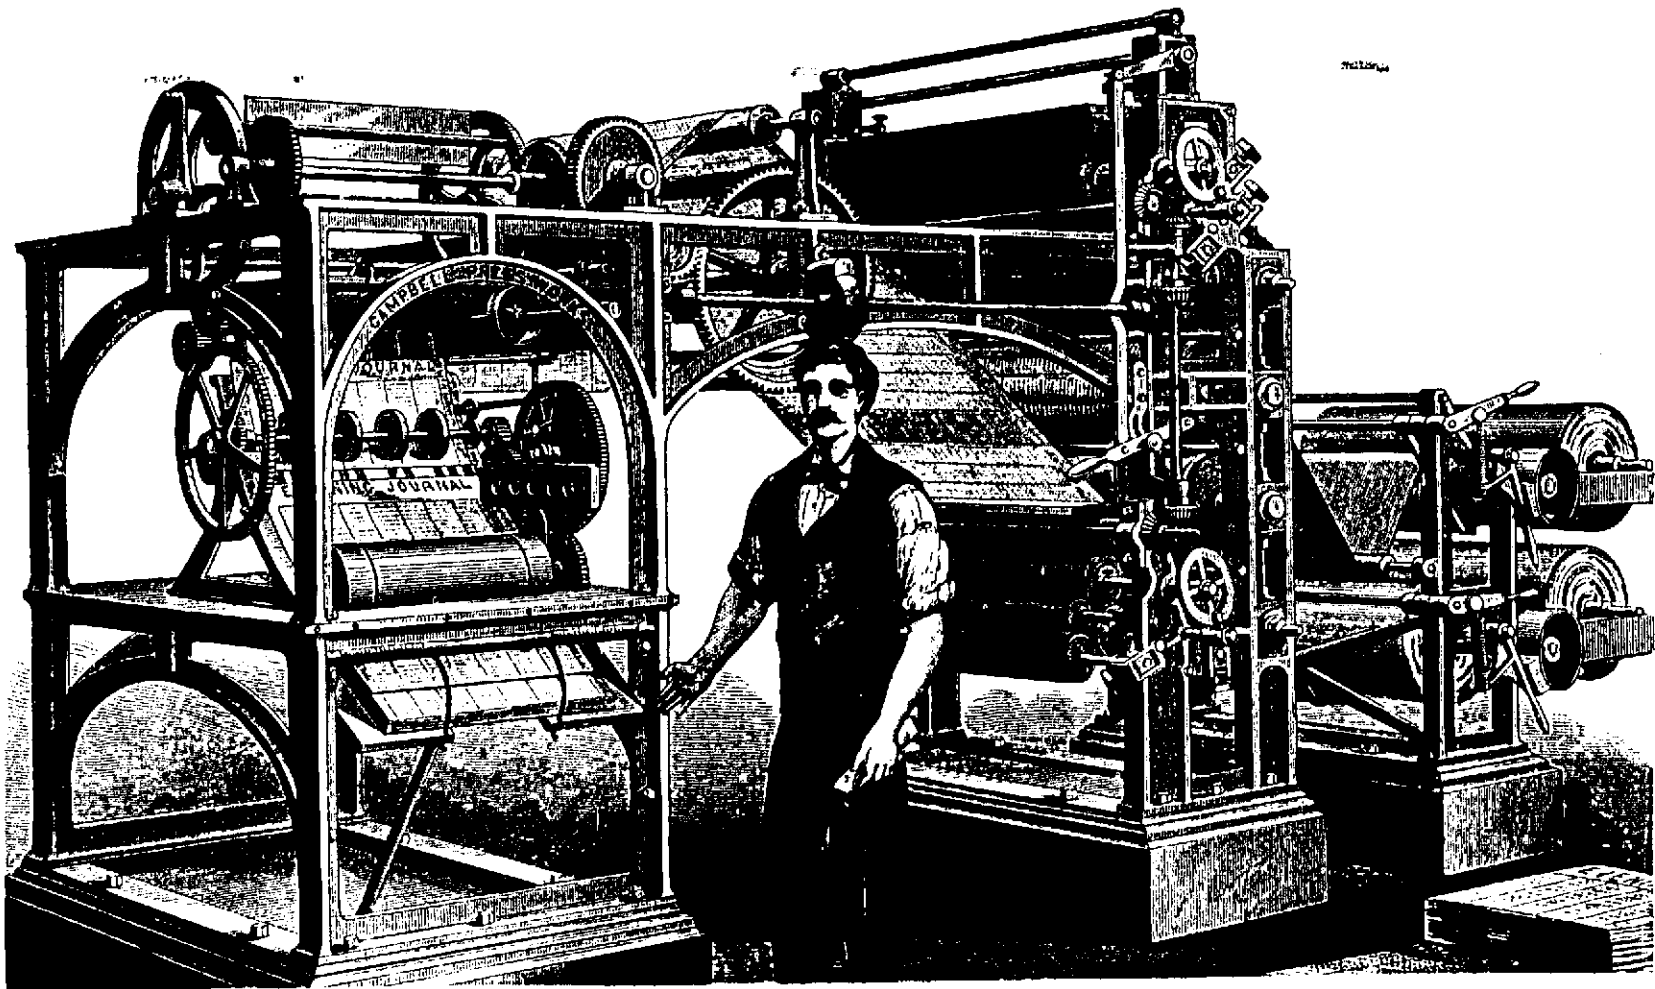

How?

"First thing I'll do is write to Lady Bird Johnson. I understand she personally reads most of the mail she gets, so perhaps this will catch her eye. She seems very understanding. I'm sure she'll do what she can."

Then Linda expects to write for wider congressional help: write for military assistance, write for aid from veterans groups such as the VFW, and even write friends in other states, urging them to write their friends to write their friends to write. . . .

Obviously, she admits, it'll take a lot of stamp licking.

But then, Pvt. Riley's girl has planned a large postal budget this year, anyway.

Checkless Society Is Not Too Far in the Future of Americans

By JOSEPH R. COYNE
WASHINGTON (AP) — In the not too distant future, you'll walk into a supermarket, buy the week's groceries and order a computer to pay the bill without one penny or even a check changing hands.

That's the forecast of George W. Mitchell, a member of the Federal Reserve Board, in what he and the banking community term a "checkless society."

"It's coming very, very fast," Mitchell said today in an interview. "By the early 1970s, the system might be set up. When people find out it's easier and more convenient to do business this way they'll take to the change."

Mitchell said computers will make the new system possible but won't eliminate coins, dollar bills or some checks. But he and others foresee the "cash card" as the main money instrument of the future.

Mitchell said it will have one excellent side effect — eliminating checks which might bounce.

Coins and currency make up slightly more than $39 billion of a total supply of money exceeding $173 billion. The remaining $134 billion is in 70 million checking accounts.

Mitchell, who is working on the checkless society idea for the board, estimated that Americans write at least 60 million checks each day, inundating bankers and the Federal Reserve Board with paper.

Processing these checks, he said, is expensive, time-consuming and geared to a completely obsolete technology.

Basically the checkless society would work in this way:

Employers, instead of sending checks to a worker, would merely contact his bank and credit his accounts with weekly or monthly salaries.

The employee making a purchase would present his cash card which would be inserted into a special machine hooked to the bank's computer. The computer would transfer funds. To pay monthly rent, mortgage, telephone or doctor bills, a housewife merely would notify the bank whom to pay and how much. The computer would do the rest.

There's even a suggestion for a "dial-a-computer" where a bank customer could pick up the phone and ask the computer how much was left in his account. Statements would be issued by the bank showing each payment and the balance.

Coins still would be used for vending machines and dollar bills for some miscellaneous items, Mitchell said it probably would be impossible to eliminate all checks although the vast majority would disappear under the proposed system.

The checkless society, he said, would be much more efficient than present-day money operations, would save money and eliminate excessive paper shuffling.

"The cost savings here are fantastic," he added.

Perhaps as a result, booksellers report a large volume of advance orders.

Harper & Row said the first printing runs to 600,000 copies. There are indications that a second printing will appear almost immediately.

Six per cent of the net receipts on the first 100,000 sales will be retained by the publishers, they said.

An undisclosed part of the earnings accruing to both Manchester and the publisher has been earmarked for the Kennedy Library.

Literary agents estimate the book may earn around $3 million.

Manchester believes — but states as fact — that Oswald went insane on Nov. 21, 1963, the night before Kennedy was assassinated. The author says Oswald's reason crumbled as the result of a quarrel with his Russian wife, Marina, from whom he was semiestranged.

She had been living in Irving, a suburb of Dallas, in the home of Ruth Paine, a friend, Oswald lived in a Dallas rooming house. He visited his wife and children on weekends.

Manchester wrote that on the night of Nov. 21, Oswald appeared to be watching television in Mrs. Paine's home. "In fact," the author says, "he was going mad."

Oswald appeared sane, however, to the police and other investigative officers who interviewed him after the assassination. The transcript of these interviews, published in the Warren Commission report, shows that Oswald told the same story to each of them. He answered certain questions but said he would not answer others until he could have an attorney with him. And he specified the attorney, "A New York lawyer whom he did not know" but who had defended some persons accused "of a conspiracy against the government."

Manchester says in his foreword he "felt entitled to record my opinions" and was "forming judgments."

But he does not pinpoint the passages in his book where fact leaves off and "opinion" or "judgment" begins.

He says that Mrs. Kennedy, contrary to McNamara and other federal officials, "hoped" a conspiracy had taken her husband's life. The book says, "for then there would be an air of inevitability about the tragedy; then she could persuade herself that if the plotters had missed on Elm Street they would have eventually succeeded elsewhere."

Manchester does not say whether Mrs. Kennedy told him this. He does not tell the reader whether it is fact or his judgment.

Michigan U. Gets a New President

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Robben Fleming, chancellor of the University of Wisconsin, was named new president of the University of Michigan today.

Fleming, 50-year-old attorney and a labor relations expert before entering the field of higher education, was chosen by the U-M Board of Regents and immediately accepted the post.

Fleming will succeed Harlan Hatcher, 69, retiring after 15 years as head of the nation's 13th largest university. U-M has 34,000 students.

Convention Needs Only 2 More States

By JAMES MARLOW
AP News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP) — Just two more states and there will be a mishmash unlike anything in 180 years.

Thirty-two state legislatures, just two short of a required two-thirds, have asked Congress to call a constitutional convention on the one man-one vote decision of the Supreme Court.

This would be the first such convention since 1787 if those other two states acted and Congress agreed. There's doubt it would. For how Congress would agree, or just getting to do it, is all a big fuzz now.

In 1964 the court held that districts in both houses of state legislatures must be "substantially" equal in population. Only a few states met that standard then. The courts have ordered the rest to get in line.

Under the court's thinking rural areas had long held more legislature seats than they were entitled to in proportion to the number held by the more densely populated cities. This became known as the one man-one vote decision.

It encountered furious objections which, although one state after another has reapportioned its legislature, haven't disappeared. One of the most vocal objectors was, and is, Sen. Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois.

This leader of the Senate Republicans tried twice, in 1965 and 1966, to get the Senate to approve a constitutional amendment undoing the court's ruling. Each time he lost by seven votes.

His amendment would let the people in a state decide whether they wanted to apportion one branch of their legislature on some basis besides population. This didn't work and something else was tried by the states themselves.

Although the court's decision wasn't made until 1964, it indicated what was coming as early as 1962 when it said legislatures' districts were subject to scrutiny by the federal courts. States took the hint.

In 1963 some of them began petitioning Congress for the constitutional convention. The real petition rush began after the 1964 action. Until now 32 states have asked for the convention. They could take this road to circumvent the court because of Article 5 in the Constitution. It says two things:

1. Congress by a two-thirds vote of each house can propose a constitutional amendment which then must be approved by three-fourths of the states. All 25 amendments have been added that way.
2. Or, two-thirds of the states can ask Congress to call a convention to propose amendments which also would have to be approved by three-fourths of the states, either by their legislatures or by conventions in those states, with Congress deciding which it should be.

While Dirksen and others have labored for such state action, they have plenty of opponents, including Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., who announced last week that 26 of the 32 legislatures which have asked for a convention were illegally apportioned when they did the asking. In most cases since then, he said, the courts have ordered them to reapportion themselves and "in most cases they have."

He said for Congress to heed the petitions of 26 illegally apportioned legislatures would be like "permitting all Democrats to have two votes in a referendum to determine whether Democrats should have two votes."

Here Proxmire was offering one reason for Congress to ignore the petitions. Confusion seems unlimited in other questions and objections raised. Even if Congress tried to vote approval for a convention, fierce filibusters almost certainly would seek to block it.

Time, one argument goes, has outdated some of the petitions because they were made by some state legislatures no longer in existence and were addressed to the 89th Congress. It's the 90th doing business now.

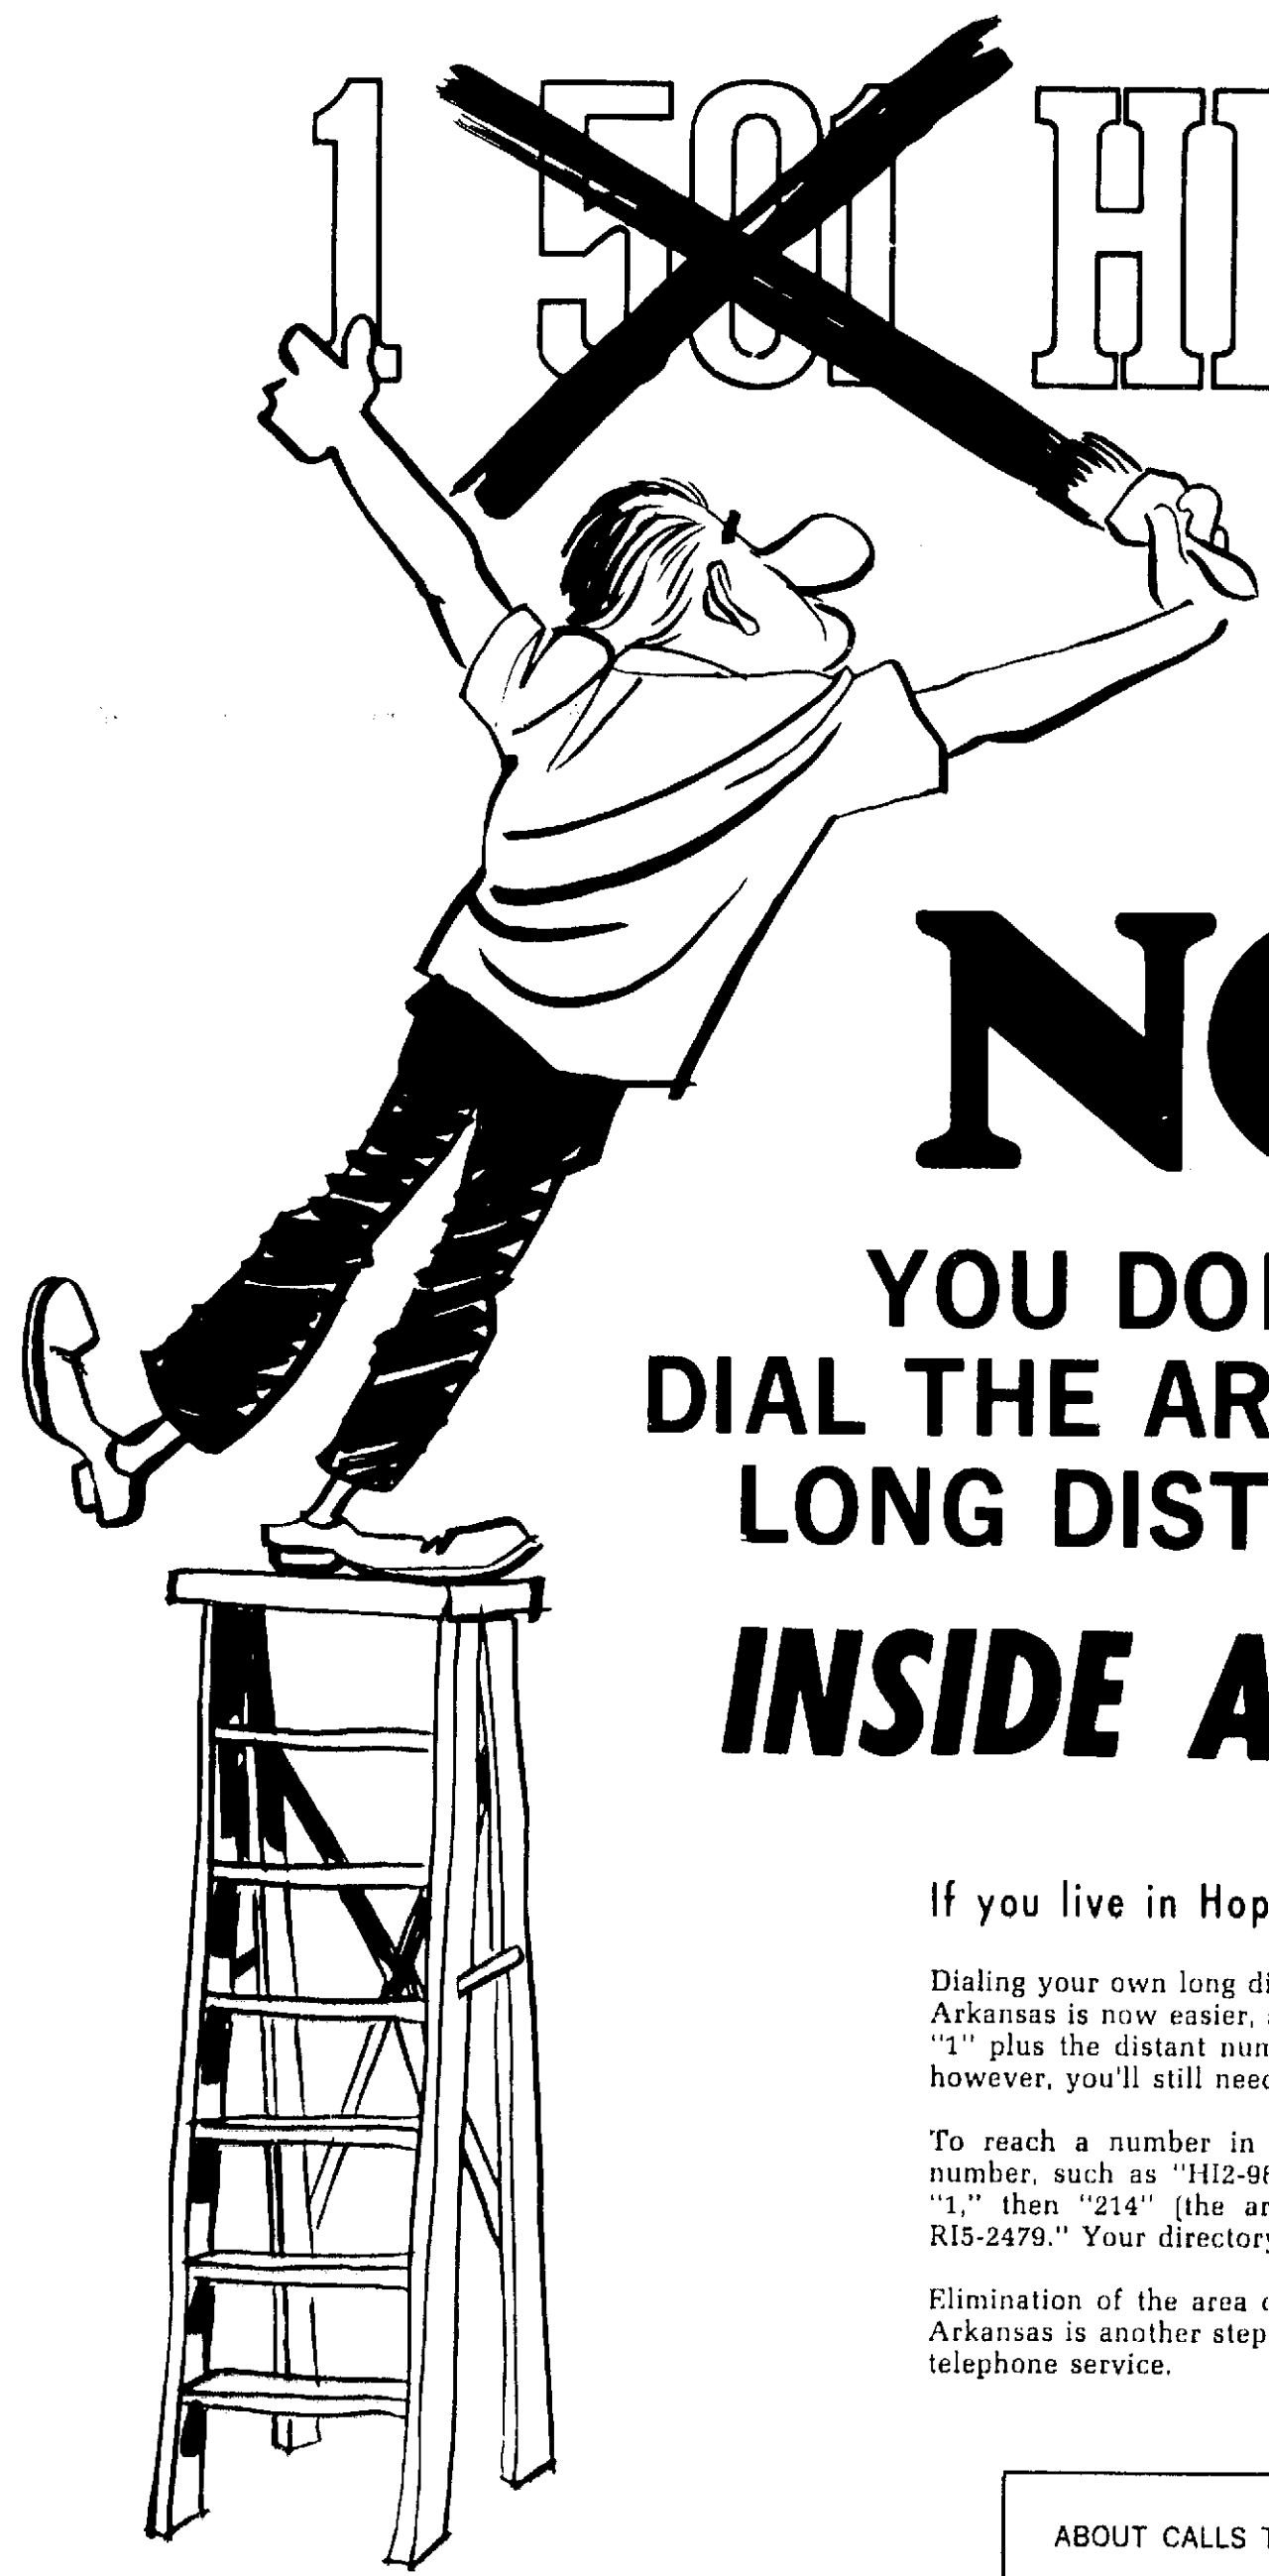

And, if the convention were called, would it be limited to the one man-one vote problem, or could it consider any kind of amendment? If the latter, then the convention might become a nightmare. And how would such a convention be organized? How many delegates would each state have? Congress would have to decide.

Feared Plot to Oust U.S. Government After Kennedy Was Killed

By REILMAN MORIN
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — Fears of an international plot to overthrow the U.S. government prompted Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara to alert every American military base around the world the minute he heard that President John F. Kennedy had been shot in Dallas, Tex., William Manchester says.

"By every readable signal the situation was very red," Manchester writes in his book, "The Death of a President."

The much-disputed book contains 350,000 words of text, plus diagrams, appendices and a list of sources. The price is $10.

McNamara "kept his head and made all the right moves" even before he learned that Kennedy was dead, Manchester says. The worldwide warning told American military commanders, "this is the time to be especially alert."

President Johnson is quoted in the book as saying "there might be war" if Americans became crouched by suspicions that Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev and Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro had conspired to kill Kennedy.

It was the "wild rumors" about a conspiracy that brought the Warren Commission into existence, Manchester says. The commission, after a long investigation, concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald — and Oswald alone — assassinated Kennedy.

Johnson had difficulty persuading Chief Justice Earl Warren to head the inquiry, Manchester says, because Warren opposed "extrajudicial activity" by Supreme Court justices.

Manchester quotes Warren as saying: "The President told me how serious the situation was. He said there had been wild rumors and there was the international situation to think of. He said he had just talked to Dean Rusk, (secretary of state) who was concerned. He said that if the public became aroused against Castro and Khrushchev there might be war."

Manchester agrees with the commission's finding. But he says its "real work" was done by the general counsel, J. Lee Rankin, and the 14 assistant counsels. As for the members of the commission, Manchester writes, "the lustrous names of the seven appointees were for public consumption."

Manchester also is critical of actions of Secret Service agents before the assassination and immediately after the first shot struck Kennedy.

He makes these points:

1. On the night before the tragedy, "nine agents of the White House detail were out on the town. They started with beer and mixed drinks at the Fort Worth Press Club."
2. "At various times, they were joined by three agents of the 1240-8 shift — who were officially on duty, assigned to guard the President's bedroom door."
3. A jet airplane pilot is grounded if he fails tests that measure his reflexes. "However, presidential bodyguards were not required to take" these tests.
4. When the first shot was fired, "most of the hunters in the motorcade identified the sound immediately as rifle fire, but the White House detail was confused."
5. Two agents were in the front seat of the presidential car. "They were in a position to take evasive action after the first shot, but for five terrible seconds, they were immobilized."

RFK Political Skill to Get Good Test

By JACK BELL
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Robert F. Kennedy's announced intention to campaign for President Johnson in 1968 is beginning to shape up as a major test of political skill for the New Yorker.

Kennedy confirmed Monday what he has been saying for a long time — he will not challenge Johnson for the Democratic presidential nomination next year.

The senator made it known through an aide that he would file the necessary sworn disclaimer of presidential intentions in Oregon, Nebraska or any other state where his name might be entered in a presidential primary.

This could change, of course, if something took Johnson out as a candidate for re-election.

But the action points Kennedy toward the necessity of campaigning vigorously to elect an individual with whom he has personal and political differences not likely to be reconciled in the months that lie ahead.

Kennedy obviously wants to carve out a position within the party that will set him apart from the Johnson administration — but not too far apart.

Some of his friends think Kennedy may have gone a little too far in this direction with his February White House spat with the President and his subsequent reiterated criticism of Johnson for not stopping the bombing of North Vietnam in the absence of any sign this would bring peace talks.

An embarrassment of publicity riches has put the senator in a position where anti-Johnson Democrats, primarily the party's liberals and youthful Vietnam protesters, have embraced him as their leader.

To hold this following intact as a nucleus for a probable bid for the 1972 presidential nomination, Kennedy cannot afford to compromise with Johnson or even soften his war position materially.

He must be for Johnson as "an outstanding president," as Kennedy himself has classified the chief executive, but against some of his most important policies.

This will present a king-size dilemma for the senator if he campaigns side by side with Johnson through New York or undertakes individual speeches for the 1968 ticket in other states.

Politicians agree, however, that Kennedy will have to dig in vigorously for Johnson. Otherwise, if the President were defeated the senator would be blamed for the loss and if Johnson won without his help Kennedy's political standing would slump.

Thant Offers New Proposal for Peace

By MAX HARRELSON
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General U Thant made public today his latest Vietnam peace proposals, calling for a general truce to be followed by preliminary talks aimed at convening a new Geneva peace conference.

Thant told a news conference that the plan had been sent to all the parties directly concerned March 14 and that some had replied.

He said he did not consider any of the answers as a categorical rejection.

The secretary-general expressed concern over what he called the recent escalation of the fighting and voiced fears that the conflict might spread unless checked.

Thant disclosed that he had presented his proposals orally to a North Vietnam delegation on his recent visit to Burma and that he had later sent the plan in a memorandum to others in interested countries.

Man Killed in Wreck at Marianna

MARIANNA, Ark. (AP) — James H. Taylor, 47, of Marianna, was killed today when his car and a transport truck collided head-on about eight miles south of here on Arkansas 1.

State Trooper Kenneth Winfrey said the truck driver, James Livingston, 27, of West Helena, was not seriously injured.

Many Indians were buried about 1,000 years ago in Missouri's Meramec Caverns.

G&F Denies Commission Not Spending

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Game and Fish Commission Director Hugh Hackler today denied charges that the commission was not spending money for fish and wildlife areas. He spoke during a House committee meeting in which two speakers said sportsmen distrusted the commission.

Hackler appeared before the State Agencies Committee to answer a charge by Rep. John Harberson of Nashville that the commission had almost $2 million in surplus money on hand.

Harberson said the money should be spent to acquire land for outdoor uses.

Hackler told the committee of many projects the commission had planned and said total obligations, including expenditures for such items as cars and trucks and commission operations, were $3,556,000. He said another year's revenue would also be applied to this amount.

Rex Hancock of Stuttgart, president of the Grand Prairie Chapter of the Arkansas Wildlife Association, said "There is definitely a feeling of distrust and criticism (of the commission) that is universal."

Lloyd McCollum of Stuttgart said one of the biggest problems was that the commission refused to listen to sportsmen. He said sportsmen had sought to talk to the commission but that they had received no satisfaction.

"They have some of the deafest ears that you can talk to," Harberson said.

The committee was to have taken up Harberson's bill calling for an independent audit of the commission and a management study. The committee, however, delayed taking action on the measure because of a lack of time.

Harberson charged that the state's wildlife program was being managed poorly.

"This audit is the only way to start getting a dollar's value for dollar spent from the taxpayer's taxes," Harberson said.

He said he was interested in an audit not for a "witchhunt" but he believed the Game and Fish Commission was not keeping faith with the public or the legislature.

Johnson, He Act Like Labor, Management

By JAMES MARLOW
AP News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you had trouble understanding the correspondence between President Johnson and Ho Chi Minh, maybe they did, too. They went at it like a labor leader and a management man negotiating a contract.

Ambiguity rather than clarity is sometimes considered a virtue in labor-management talks, at least in the beginning for bargaining purposes. The peace talk letters between Johnson and the president of North Vietnam were ambiguous.

Four times Johnson ordered a pause in the bombing of North Vietnam, each time hoping didn't say how he would have to North Vietnam would reciprocate by toning down its side of the war. Such an action would be considered a desire to talk peace.

Each time, Johnson said, he got no peace signal. He refused infiltration had stopped before to order an indefinite bombing pause for this expressed reason:

It would provide a one-sided advantage for North Vietnam because the bombing was intended to put a crimp in the troop reinforcements North Vietnam was sending into the South and in the supplies it was sending to its troops already there.

Thus a bombing pause, unless North Vietnam took some reciprocal action, would let the North Vietnamese send troops and supplies into the South unmolested to kill Americans there. So, to get peace talks started, Johnson wrote Ho Chi Minh a proposal.

He told the North Vietnamese he was ready to stop the bombing and sending more U.S. troops to Vietnam "as soon as I am assured that infiltration into South Vietnam by land and sea has stopped."

This must have left Ho Chi Minh guessing a bit, Johnson didn't say how he would have to be "assured" infiltration into the South had stopped.

The North Vietnamese might interpret that as meaning Johnson would keep the bombing going quite a while after the infiltration had stopped before he felt "assured" it had ended.

And what did Johnson mean

Wednesday, March 29, 1967
by infiltration? Did he just mean North Vietnam must stop sending new troops into the South? Or did he mean both new troops and supplies for the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong already there?

Since Johnson didn't demand a pause in the fighting in South Vietnam — along with a bombing pause and an end to infiltration — what would North Vietnamese troops in South Vietnam do if the fighting continued and they had no supplies?

Further, while Johnson said he would send no more U.S. troops to Vietnam if the infiltration stopped, he didn't say he would stop sending supplies. So, was he saying it would be all right to pump supplies into U.S. troops in South Vietnam but not all right for North Vietnam to do the same for its troops?

Ho Chi Minh, in turn, had some ambiguities of his own. For two years he had repeatedly said there could be no settlement in Vietnam unless the United States pulled out all its troops and supplies and let the Vietnamese settle their own problems, and unless the Viet Cong could take over the South.

Those had been Hanoi's terms. But there's a big difference between a final settlement and peace talks leading to a settlement. And for two years Ho Chi Minh was vague on whether peace talks had to produce Hanoi's settlement.

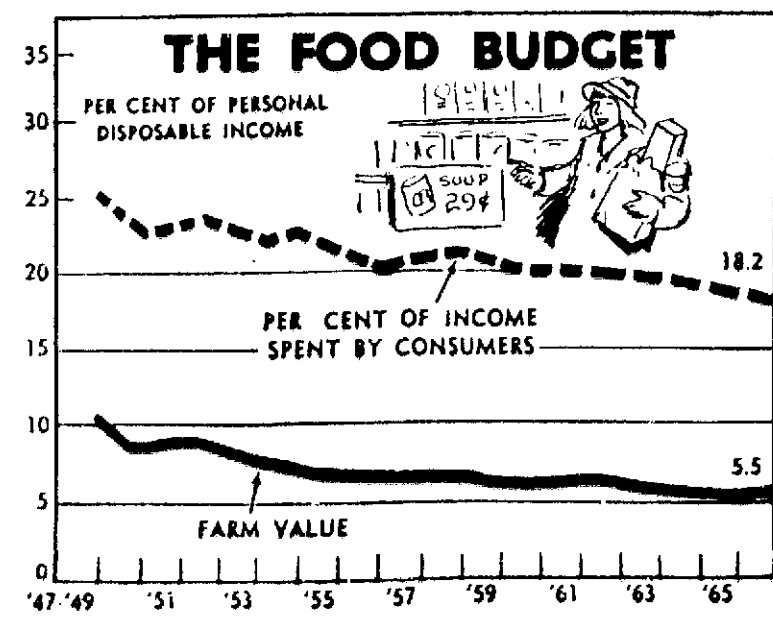

Then he answered Johnson, repeating some of Hanoi's terms, but not quite. He didn't say the Viet Cong must be allowed to take over the South. But he said the bombing must be stopped "definitely" and "unconditionally."

In the next paragraph he said before there could be peace talks the United States must stop the bombing "unconditionally" — which is what Johnson had said he wouldn't do — and stop "all other acts of war."

What "other acts of war"? That could mean almost anything and Ho Chi Minh didn't get specific. He seemed to be leaving himself a bargaining point. How could Johnson agree to anything as vague as that? He couldn't and won't.

Instead of going on from this point to find out what each other had in mind, the two sides apparently are going on as if there had been no letters.

There was disappointment in this country that Ho Chi Minh, instead of being so final about it, didn't suggest further explorations. But, for that matter, Johnson didn't, either.

The share of disposable income spent for food by American consumers has dropped steadily during the past 20 years and so has the portion income share received by farmers for the food they produce and sell. Both trends are continuing, the Agriculture Department reports.

Relations With Europe Not Good

By JAMES MARLOW
AP News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — President John F. Kennedy made a big thing of Europe. He went there twice in his 34 months as president. Relations with the allies looked good. Europeans loved him and mourned when he died.

It's the opposite with President Johnson. He has been in office 40 months and hasn't gone near Europe. Relations with the allies are beginning to look tattered and he is widely criticized there for the Vietnamese war.

If he went now, his reception might not be happy. Instead he has sent Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey on a two-week tour of Europe. Humphrey is not supposed to be going as Johnson's substitute.

But it's obvious this is a fence-mending mission. Why hasn't Johnson gone in his almost 3½ years in the White House? He may feel, and probably would say, he has been too busy. It seems unlikely he could have been that busy.

In his first full year in office, 1964, Johnson might have made such a trip. But that was an election year. Johnson had a big job to learn. Yet, Kennedy went to Europe in his first year, although 1961 was not an election year.

Then in 1965 Johnson was heavily occupied in two directions, one with Congress, one with Vietnam. At home he dumped a tremendous bundle of programs on Congress which responded to his prodding with prodigious legislation.

That was the happy part of the year for him. The Vietnam side was grisly for during 1964 the war there had gone downhill for the American side which had tried to sweat it out without full involvement. It didn't work.

In February 1965, in ordering the bombing of North Vietnam, Johnson began to step up the war. Then he piled U. S. troops into the fighting. Vietnam has been a monkey on his back ever since.

Despite his success with Congress in 1965, Johnson's prestige at home and abroad dwindled as American involvement in Vietnam got deeper and more bloody. Even so, another president in his place might have ventured a European trip.

But Johnson is a man who, once he is committed to something, pours his waking hours into it. He has stayed on top of the war every minute, apparently being less concerned with Congress which never since has matched its 1965 record.

He wants to read everything relating to him and his administration as soon as it moves on the wires. Much of it in the past couple of years has not been flattering because so much involved criticism of him about Vietnam.

He has been complaining that much, if not most, of what has been written about him is unfair. He was anything but delighted with what happened at his recent conference on Guam.

There South Vietnam's Premier Nguyen Cao Ky, a graceful, colorful man took the news play away from Johnson and top U.S. aides by his fiery talk to reporters.

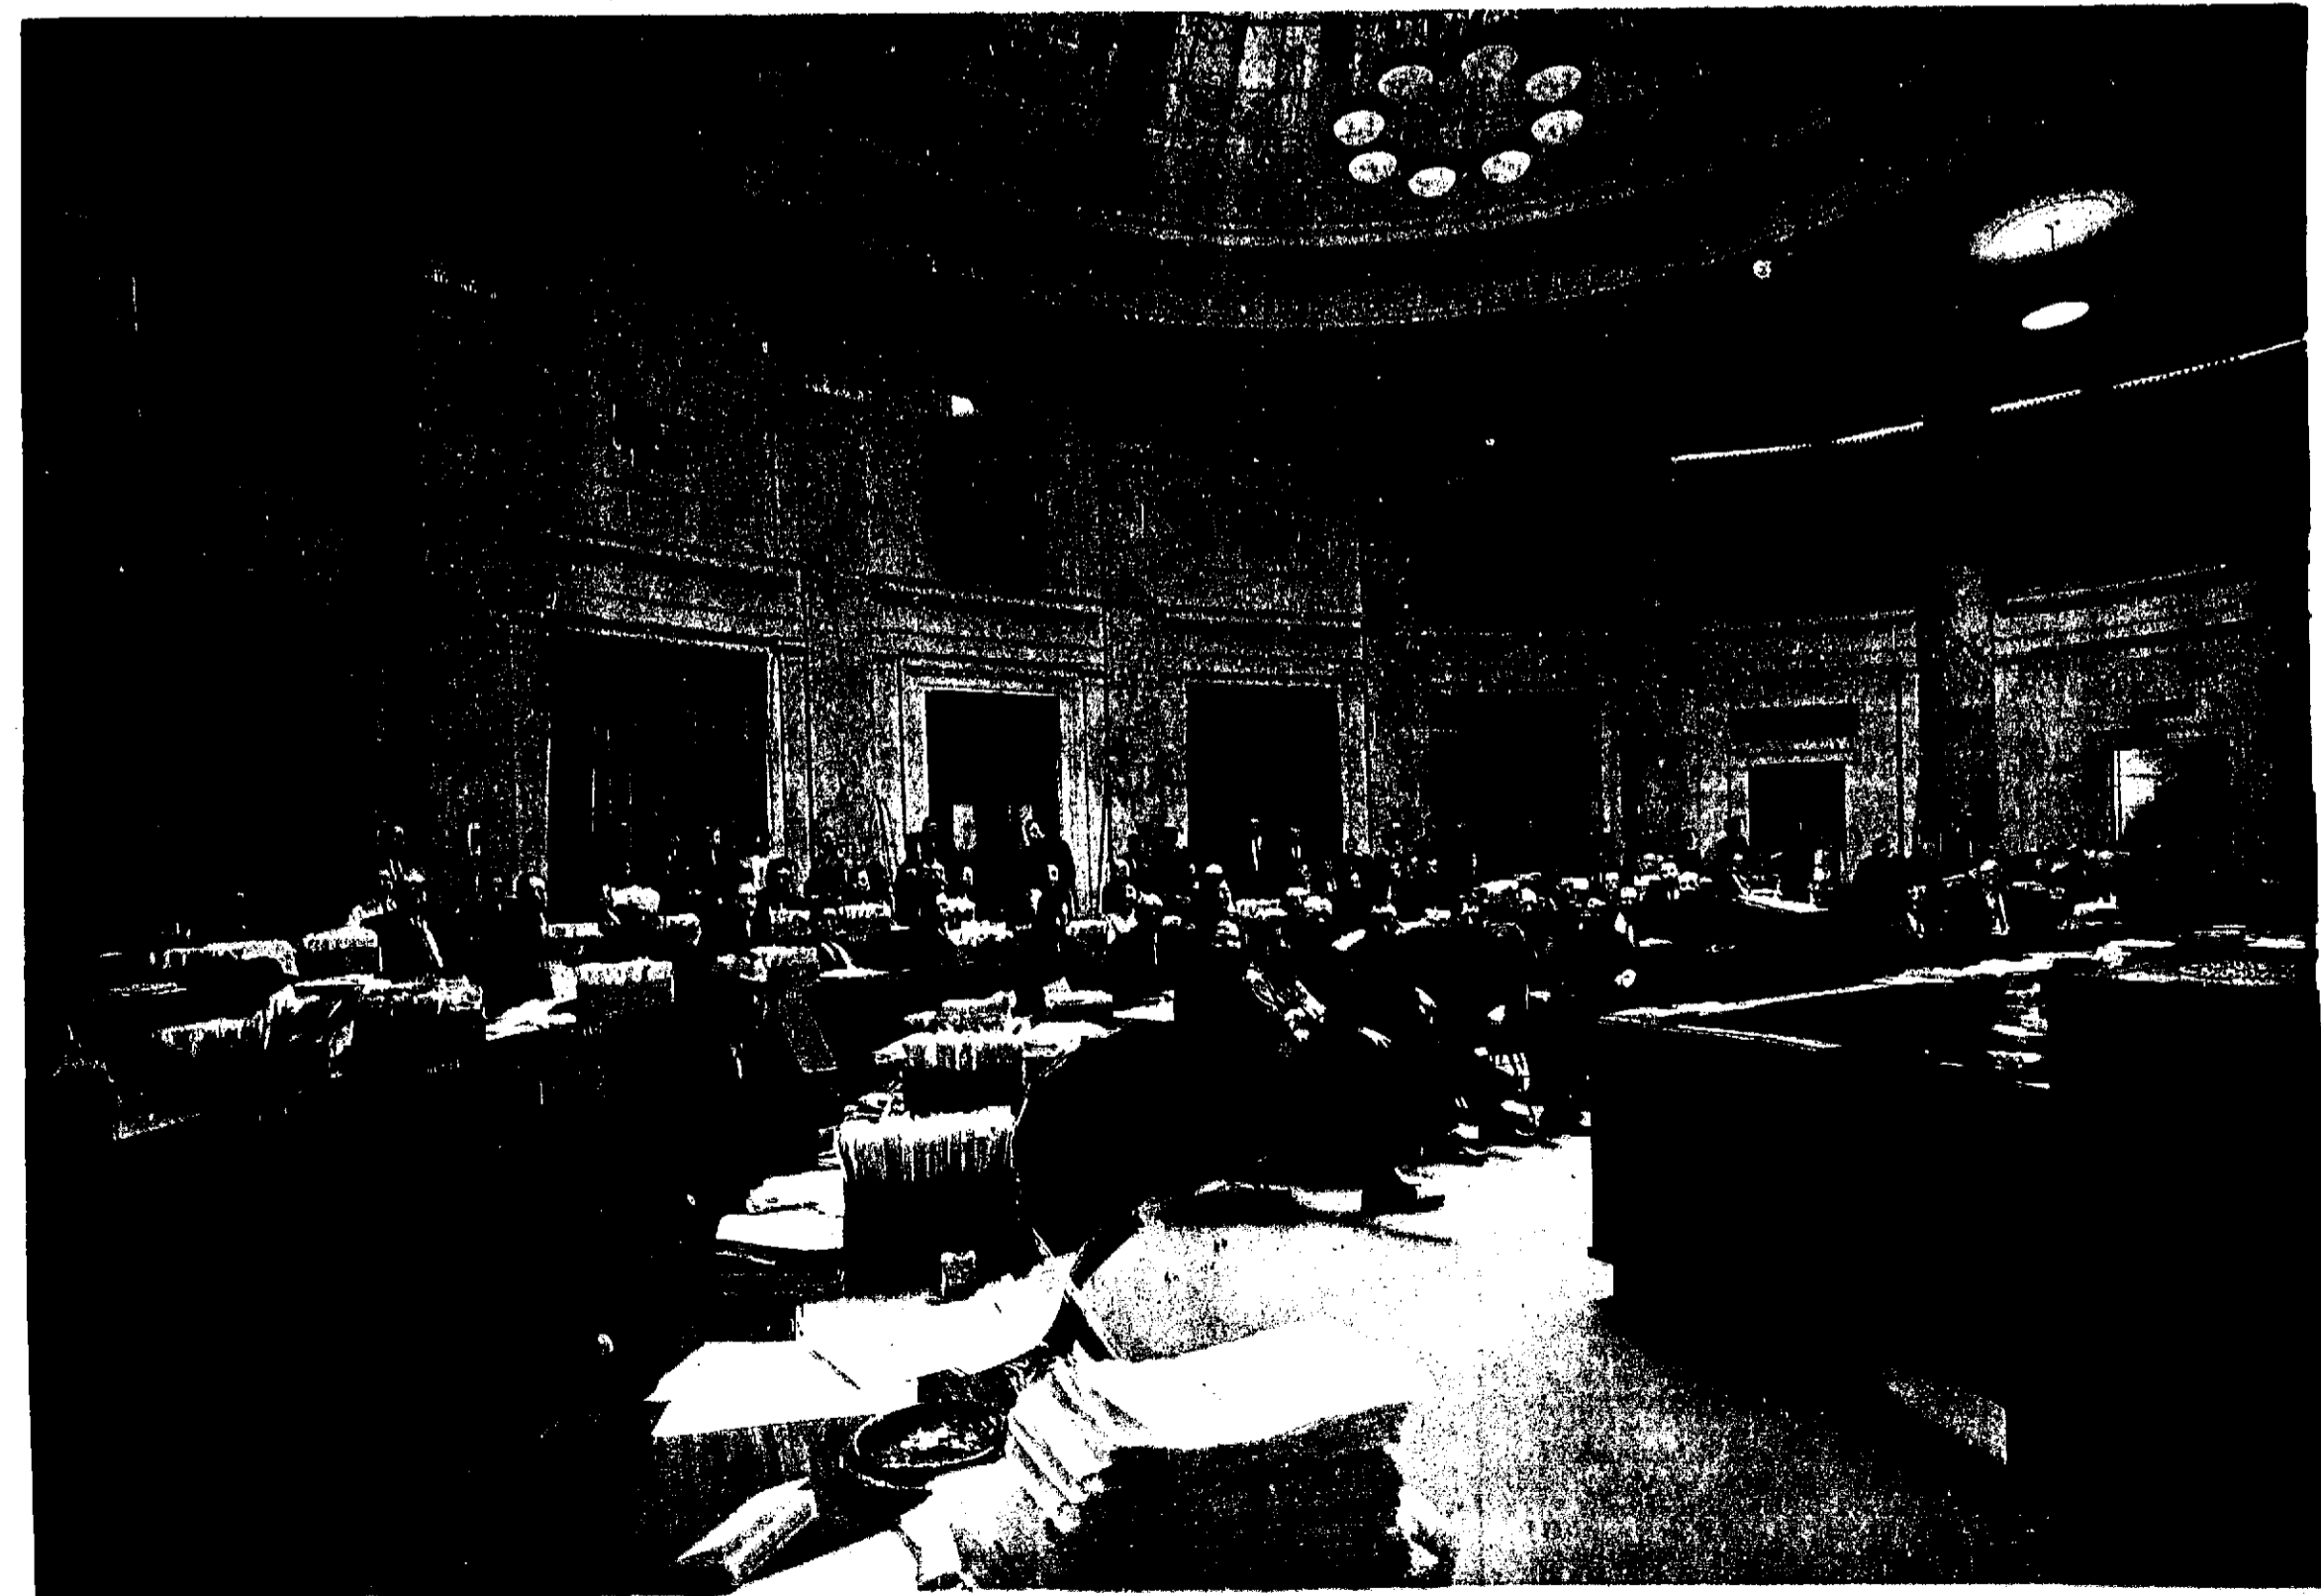

There was only one real reason why this could happen. Ky was decisive about making war on North Vietnam. In comparison, what Johnson and his aides had to say seemed like banalities.

Yet Johnson, who has always wished for approval, has steadfastly refused to seek it if doing so meant doing what he thinks is wrong to do: easing up on the war or trying to back out of it.

He knows that if the war drags on into 1968 — and the North Vietnamese are probably betting that the realization of it will make him knuckle under — it may cost him re-election.

But he shows no signs of being deterred by that and until there is peace in Vietnam, or some sign of it, he may still stay away from Europe where criticism, and perhaps public anti-Johnson demonstrations, might await him.

4-Color Photos of the Redecorated Senate and House Chambers and the Membership of the 66th Arkansas Assembly

On Feb. 9, 1967, the 66th General Assembly adopted Concurrent Resolution No. 32 congratulating the Hope (Ark.) Star and its editor and publisher, Alex H. Washburn, for the purchase of the second Berkey color-separation machine sold to an American newspaper, for their pioneering work in publishing full color pictures, and for the national publicity this has given Arkansas.

The General Assembly invited Mr. Washburn to photograph both chambers in color, and this he did, making the Senate Chamber picture at the top on Feb. 27, and the House Chamber on March 8. On lighting and other technical problems he was assisted by Bob Jones and Harry Squires of the Jungkind Co., Little Rock photo supply firm; and by C. M. (Pod) Rogers of The Star staff.

The color separations for these pictures were made from 4x5 Ektachrome transparencies on The Star's 8x10-inch Berkey separator, the operators being Gordon L. Price of Eastman Kodak Co., Dallas, Texas; and Garland Bosley of the Jungkind Co., with Mr. Washburn assisting. Eventually this most difficult job of the graphic arts will be handled by The Star's staff.

Land Deals Already Over $1 Million

A record check at the Hempstead County Courthouse reveals land transactions since January 1 in this County run well over the $1 million mark with one transaction alone at the half million dollar mark. Several deals were near the $100,000 mark.

It also reveals that lands forfeited to the State of Arkansas for non-payment of taxes only total $113,40 in taxes. This covers city property too.

Mineral leases covering approximately 4,000 acres have been bought by several oil companies.

The biggest land transaction was between H. C. Cabe and others to the Champlon Paper Co., Inc. which plans to build a paper mill on Little River just below Millwood dam on the Hempstead County side. This deal reached the half million dollar mark. Following is a list of some major transactions and in lieu of dollars of some transfers the amount of the USIR stamps affixed are noted. The USIR stamps are $1.10 for each $1,000. All acreage is approximate.

Lawton Cobb, et al to G. R. Whitten, $50.00 — 345 acres.

Ray Banks Jr. et al to G. R. Whitten et al $17.50 — 127 acres.

H. Mike Burge et al to H. C. Cabe, et al — no stamps — 865 acres.

Grace M. Cass to Joseph A. Jones — $34,000 — 128 acres.

M. L. Rogers to H. C. Cabe, et al — $17,60 stamps — 160 acres.

John W. Dillard, et al to Rufus Dobson — $126.00 stamps — 500 acres.

Elgin Moses et al to T. L. Brint et al — $19.80 stamps — 11 acres.

S. E. Loe et al to Jewett Spell et al — $27,500 — 160 acres.

Sam A. McGill et al to USA $32,000 — 172 acres.

Edgar Jurlis et al to J. D. McKamie, et ux — $16.50 stamps — 28 acres.

H. C. Cabe et al to Champlon Paper Inc., — $533.50 stamps.

Dorsey McRae et al to H. C. Cabe, et al — $27.50 stamps.

Joe Porterfield et al to James C. Gaines et ux — 35.20 stamps.

J. H. Ingram et al to Redlands Farms, Inc. — $75,000 — 800 acres.

R. Ballard et al to Mrs. Marjorie Rogers — $24.20 stamps.

C. D. Lester et ux to H. C. Cabe, et al — $87,745 — 450 acres.

Rufus B. Dobson et al to L. E. Bradberry et al — $150.15 stamps.

J. H. Harvey Estate to Franklin Collier et al — $148,842 — 1750 acres.

W. J. Noel et ux to Z. O. Faughn et ux — 470 acres.

Nat'l Arrest Strategy Suggested

WASHINGTON (AP) — Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark told more than 600 law enforcement officials today they must make the National Crime Commission's report the foundation for "a national strategy to arrest and then reverse the trend toward lawlessness."

Clark's speech opened a two-day conference on crime control. The meeting, attended by law enforcement officers, judges and corrections personnel from every state, was called to start implementation of more than 200 recommendations made last month by the commission set up by President Johnson.

Clark said had a similar meeting been held a generation ago after an earlier national crime report, "criminal justice in America might be of significantly higher quality."

He said the crime commission's 352-page report and recommendations "can be either a blueprint of a national strategy for crime control or another ancient and forgotten tome."

The focus of the $2-million crime study, 18 months in the making, is on the lawlessness that frightens some Americans off the streets and preys on others through organized syndicates.

Our Daily Bread

Sliced Thin by The Editor
Alex H. WashburnState Government — Salute to One
People Still Own

Today's Color Salute to the 66th Arkansas General Assembly is an expression of thanks for Concurrent Resolution No. 32 of Feb. 9 in which the lawmakers congratulated The Star and your editor for purchasing the second Berkeley color separator sold to an American newspaper, for helping pioneer the introduction of full-color pictures in newspapers, and for the publicity it has given Arkansas in the national trade journals of the graphic arts.

Southwest Arkansas has helped us make this a sizable edition, 20 pages in 2 sections — and so we say Thank You also to the citizens of Hope and our area. In this day of prodigal federal spending and endless bureaucratic confusion it is wise for individual citizens to somewhere draw the line on which they will stand and fight for independence and freedom. That line has to be the maintenance of the integrity and independence of the state government, performing its own service, covering the cost in full with taxes collected from the people, and still old-fashioned enough to recognize that its major responsibility is to the common folks back home.

Politics may be a dirty word at times — but when crisis threatens, it slips out of its baggy coat of slang and takes on the mantle of ancient and true meaning: The art of government. And in these confused times the state is the one government we are still sure we own and are accountable for. A well-run state government can be an example that will check the onrush of federal bureaucracy and debt and help restore America as a solvent and orderly republic.

And so today Southwest Arkansas salutes the 66th General Assembly. There are technical reasons why our four-color reproductions in today's edition should be better than they actually are. This is no fault of either the Berkeley color separator or our five-unit Fairchild rotary offset press — but a human error during the pioneering stage of producing process color.

This is only our third full-color printing of pictures. The other two were "on the money." But this time someone forgot one of the 51 steps by which separation negatives are produced. It was the very first step — to punch all four negatives simultaneously so correct "register" would be assured. After the omission was discovered our press crew had no option but to register by hand — a difficult and uncertain job. But this is a trade hazard you have to reckon with when just starting off in a new and complex process.

On the credit side, Hope Star has received two 16x20 color laboratory enlargements of our original Etchachromes, and these will be presented Thursday to the Senate and House chambers — along with 1,000 copies of today's edition.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson ordered the Central Intelligence Agency today to begin cutting off all subsidies to private educational, philanthropic and cultural organizations.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson has redesignated William McClesney Martin Jr., as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, the White House announced today.

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Pulaski Circuit Judge William J. Kirby today ordered the arrest of two newsmen jailed last week on contempt of court charges.

Kirby issued warrants for the arrest of Mike Smith of the Pine Bluff Commercial and Jack Baker of the Arkansas Gazette after the state Supreme Court dismissed an appeal by the newsmen.

Kirby appeared irate that the two were not in court today, and said if they had been, he would have released them on their own recognizance, or without bond.

Shortly before noon, neither of the two was in jail.

Court Also Delays Order for Records

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Arkansas Supreme Court stayed Tuesday an order by Faulkner Circuit Judge Russell C. Roberts requiring that some Republican Party financial records be brought into his court.

The high court ruling was made on petitions filed by Mrs. Wanda Tudor and the First National Bank, custodian of an account used for election expenses in Faulkner County last year.

Roberts had directed that the records be delivered to him by 5 p.m. Tuesday. Faulkner Prosecutor Jeff Mobley is seeking to obtain the records in an investigation of alleged election irregularities.

Mrs. Tudor signed some checks on the account that were issued to Faulkner County Negroes. She has denied that the money was used improperly.

Mrs. Tudor is now a receptionist in Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller's office.

Earlier Tuesday, the Republican Party asked Pulaski Chancellor John T. Jernigan to prevent the bank from disclosing information under Roberts' order.

The Supreme Court instructed attorneys for Mrs. Tudor and the bank to file briefs in the case.

In the chancery court suit, Odell Pollard, the Republican state chairman, said that the Republican Party was the sole owner of the account. The suit identified Mrs. Tudor as the person in whose name the account was held.

Jernigan set a hearing on the suit for April 18. It was revealed Tuesday that Mrs. Tudor and Dr. Wayne Babbitt, a former GOP official, has filed disclaimers Saturday stating that they had assigned the account to the GOP and that neither had an interest in it any longer.

Pollard said the party had a right to keep its financial records confidential and that disclosure of the records could cause the party "irreparable harm and damage."

Assassination Probe Back to Courtrooms

By JOHN S. LANG
NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison's John F. Kennedy assassination conspiracy probe is moving back into courtrooms, here and in Nebraska.

Attorney Steve Plotkin was scheduled to appear today before Criminal Dist. Judge Edward Haggerty to seek dismissal of Garrison's warrant for the arrest of Gordon Novel as a material witness here.

In Omaha, Neb., Lillie Mae McMaines — known in New Orleans as Sandra Moffett — will decide whether to waive extradition after her arrest as a material witness in Garrison's case.

Her appearance in court today was solely on the matter of waiving extradition. If Mrs. McMaines, 22, decides to fight her return to Louisiana, a preliminary hearing will be held April 25 in Omaha's Municipal Court.

The New Orleans Parish grand jury subpoenaed Layton P. Martens, 24, a former roommate of the late David W. Ferrie, to appear today.

Development Council to Meet Thurs.

The Hempstead County Development Council will meet at the Hope City Hall on Thursday night, March 30, at 7:30 according to Arthur Strech, Chairman.

Last year the council drew up an overall Economic Development Plan and submitted it to Washington for approval as a development area. The plan was approved which meant that certain matching funds, grants, and loans became available to the people of this county. Recently a progress report was forwarded to Washington for re-designation Mr. Strech said.

House Gives WR Big Success While Senate Deals Him a Jolt

By ROBERT L. SHAW
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Arkansas House gave Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller his biggest success of the legislative session Tuesday while the Senate dealt him one of his most dismal affronts.

The House passed Senate bills creating a state Department of Administration and a Personnel Division within the new agency, but the Senate overrode a Rockefeller veto and tampered with the proposed Revenue Stabilization Act despite his plea that it be left alone.

The governor showed up outside the House chamber after the representatives adjourned for the day to extend his thanks.

"I think this is one of the red letter days from my point of view for the entire session," the jubilant governor said. "This gives me the tools to get to work and prove what I can do."

The House added icing to the cake by passing 53-33 an administration bill for compulsory motor vehicle inspection, the last of four measures requiring passage to put the state in compliance with federal regulations.

The Senate voted 18-10 to join the House in overriding Rockefeller's veto of a bill increasing assistance grants to welfare recipients in nursing homes by $30 a month this year and $10 next year.

The veto was the fourth that has been overridden by the legislature — the third in two days. The Senate took its action despite warnings by Rockefeller, Welfare Commissioner A. J. (Red) Moss and officials of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare that the bill jeopardized federal funds because it deviated from HEW guidelines.

Rockefeller increased the grants by $20 by administrative action after vetoing the measure.

Moss told the Senate, meeting in a committee of the whole, that he was having a difficult time justifying Rockefeller's administrative increases to HEW. He also said the bill might conflict with Social Security requirements and could mean that welfare recipients faced a decrease in Social Security benefits or even loss of them.

Sen. Guy Jones of Conway, who got the Senate to reconsider its failure earlier in the day to pass the bill, told the senators that the Conway municipal judge had assured him the bill did not endanger federal funds.

The Senate attached two amendments to the Revenue Stabilization Act. It voted 25-5 to amend the bill to guarantee that the state's 18,000 public school teachers receive minimum $500 raises during each year of the next biennium by increasing the primary allocation for the public schools by about $6 million. The money would put the government on a that are expected to be on hand in the state general improvements fund next June 30.

The amendment was drawn by the Arkansas Education Association and sponsored by Sen. Clarence Bell of Parkin.

The Senate changed the revenue stabilization bill to give the cities a better chance of receiving more of the $22.4 million appropriated for them. The amendment eliminates the law priority Allocation D in which the bulk of the cities' increase was paced and puts half of the increase in each of the next two years in Allocation B.

The Senate gave Rockefeller some solace by passing the administration's bill establishing a Governmental Efficiency Study Commission.

Rockefeller campaigned fervently for his Department of Administration, which he said would be taken from balances business-like basis and save millions of dollars through more efficient operations.

Representatives said the governor should be given a chance to do what he says he can do and passed the bill 85-8 after

Highway Audit Bill Is Killed

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Roads and Highways Committee of the Arkansas House killed the administration's bill calling for a management study and independent audit of the Highway Department Tuesday by giving it a "do not pass" recommendation.

The committee earlier in the month gave the same recommendation to a nearly identical bill sponsored by Reps. John Flanagan of Forrest City and John Harberson of Nashville.

Rep. John P. Bethell of Des Arc made the "do not pass" motion. He said the management audit would only raise questions on whether roads have been built in the right place.

"You won't do anything but start everybody to feuding and fussing," he said.

Rep. Hugh Beasley of Hot Springs, who supported the first management and audit bill, said that if the audit showed nothing wrong, Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller would call it a "whitewash." He said the governor "evidently had something in mind" when he asked for an independent audit.

Women Supplied Hacksaw Blades

BAKER, Ore. (AP) — Mrs. Grace Handy and Mrs. Carol Marshall, both of Baker, have been charged with bringing hacksaw blades into the Baker County Jail March 2 and aiding an attempted jailbreak March 7.

The escape involved four prisoners awaiting extradition to Arkansas where they escaped earlier from Tucker Prison Farm.

26 States Contending Federal Law Leading to U.S. Control of Police

By DAN HAMRICK
BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — Twenty-six states went to court today with arguments that a federal law threatens to end the federal-state system and could lead to federal control of police departments.

The case raises a question as old as the United States: Where does federal authority end and states' rights begin?

Maryland and the other states — their arguments so voluminous that a grocery cart was used to move the file — are attacking 1966 amendments to the Fair Labor Standards Act. The amendments brought some employees of states and political subdivisions under coverage of federal wage and hour provisions for the first time.

A three-judge federal panel began today a hearing on the constitutionality of the amendments and on a request by the states for an injunction to prohibit the federal government from enforcing their provisions. The federal government has filed a motion for dismissal.

Atty. Gen. Francis B. Burch of Maryland initiated the suit against the law, which sets minimum wages for employees of schools, hospitals, nursing homes and institutions for the mentally or physically handicapped — public and private.

The law fixes their minimum hourly wage at $1.15 in the first year, $1.30 in the second year, $1.45 in the third and $1.60 in the fourth. Some 1.4 million public employees are affected.

The court action delayed the statute's date of enactment which had been Feb. 2, 1967.

"If hospitals and schools can be the subjects of regulation," Texas said in its complaint, "then the public health department, the police, the highway department, even the legislature would be subject to regulation at the whim of Congress."

Defendants are W. Willard Wirtz, secretary of labor; Charles T. Lundquist, administrator of the Wage and Hour and Public Contracts Division of the Labor Department; and Wil-

No Move to Replace Foley

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Revenue Commissioner Bethel Larey said Tuesday that he knew of no move to replace Vic R. Foley of West Memphis as the department's director for Crittenden County.

Foley was the central figure in one of the early clashes between the Arkansas Senate and Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller.

Sen. W. K. Ingram of West Memphis said he was surprised. Ingram blocked the appointment of Miss Ann Payton of West Memphis to the board of the state Girls Training School because he could not get Republicans to promise to keep Foley.

Republican state headquarters also said no one on the state level had been after Foley's job.

Agency Says Democrats Owe $1,800

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — An advertising agency executive says that the Democratic Party still owes about $1,800 from the 1966 campaign.

Larry J. Albritton of the Bidle Co., made the statement after a report circulated that Democratic debts totaled about $2,000.

Albritton, contacted at home Monday, was quoted as saying the amount was "closer to $1,800" but that he would have to check records to determine the exact status of the account. He said later, however, that the agency's relationship with its clients was confidential.

Leon Catlett, the Democratic state chairman, said he did not know that the debt existed. Jim Johnson, the defeated Democratic candidate for governor, said that he used the Bidle Agency and staff and paid the bills through the primary. After the primary, he said, the party took over expenses.

William Hargadine, a regional director of the division. The AFL-CIO, representing 13.5 million members, and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, representing more than 100,000 employees of schools, hospitals and other institutions, joined on the government side as "friends of the court."

"The greatest single victory in the war on poverty," the AFL-CIO has called the legislation.

Says Register Bill Means a Rebellion

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Republican State Chairman Odell Pollard predicted Tuesday that Arkansas voters will rebel against the legislature for passing a bill to require voter registration by party.

The general assembly approved the bill over Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller's veto Monday, putting into effect an election requirement that Republicans have fought for six years.

Pollard said the Democratic majority in the legislature had "ignored the fact that the people approved a voter registration amendment without a party affiliation requirement."

"We believe the voters will be heard in this matter," said Pollard. "We believe they will rebel against being disenfranchised at the polls."

The bill would keep members of one party from voting in the other party's primary. Voters who declare themselves to be independents will not be able to vote in either primary.

"The only good thing to come from this law will be the strengthening of the Arkansas Republican Party," Pollard said. "We believe the legislators have made many, many Republicans out of independents and Democrats. And we welcome every one of them."

Another Peace Effort Collapses But LBJ to Keep on Trying

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Apparent collapse of another Vietnamese peace effort has brought fresh promises from President Johnson and Secretary of State Dean Rusk that they will persist in trying to move the war to the conference table.

But Washington officials view the prospects for success as growing constantly more gloomy.

At the same time, however, administration leaders reportedly believe the United States is now ahead of Hanoi in the battle for world opinion as a result of Hanoi's spurning peace proposals from Johnson and U.N. Secretary-General U Thant.

In a guarded reference to this diplomatic and propaganda side of the conflict, Rusk told a news conference Tuesday: "If Hanoi supposes that somehow international opinion will come to their

Humphrey in Germany for Talks

By HARRY KELLY

BONN, Germany (AP) — Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey arrived in West Germany today for talks with West German officials and the top American diplomats stationed in Europe and Canada.

Humphrey flew to Wahn Airport from The Hague, where he talked with Dutch officials Tuesday.

His discussions in Bonn were expected to focus on relations between the United States and West Germany and particularly the West German government's lack of enthusiasm for the proposed treaty to check the spread of nuclear weapons.

From the airport, which serves both Bonn and Cologne, Humphrey drove to Cologne to visit a cathedral. Then he was to go to Bad Godesberg — outside Bonn — for the conference of U.S. ambassadors.

Later Humphrey was to meet with Willy Brandt, West Germany's vice chancellor and foreign minister.

The meetings today and Thursday will set the stage for a return visit to Germany April 5-6, when Humphrey will have talks with Chancellor Kurt Kiesinger.

Humphrey will be trying to smooth the way for the nuclear nonproliferation treaty. Negotiations in Geneva are now in recess for six weeks while the United States tries to line up its allies behind the proposed pact.

West Germany and other West European nations contend that the treaty, as it now is written, could discriminate against their development of nuclear power and could open the way to Communist spying on such development.

City Explores Tax Hike for Street Work

Hope city directors last night explored the possibility of a $500,000 street improvement program calling for new paving, curb and gutter on main thoroughfares and heavily traveled streets.

Such a project, without federal aid, would mean the levying of a five-mill property tax and a city-wide vote on the proposal.

Last night's discussion was in the "talking stage". Before the proposal could become a reality, streets would have to be selected from the city's master street improvement plan.

A conference with a bonding company representative would also be necessary to determine the city's capacity in issuing the bond amounts, followed by a city-wide vote.

A second alternative for street improvement was discussed in which the city has a new tool in which to accomplish the work.

The "new tool" is a recently passed law by the state legislature calling for city and property-owner participation.

It was pointed out that in the past many street improvement proposals had been "killed" when a few property owners balked and refused to enter into 100 percent agreement in organizing improvements districts.

Only a three-fourths majority of property owners on any selected street is now necessary. An assessment, according to the new law, could be levied against the property of the other 25 percent or less, whichever the case might be.

The city has a standing offer, it was pointed out, in which paying can be accomplished by city-property-owner participation:

1. Paving alone at 75 cents per running foot cost to the property owner. A 100-foot lot would mean only $75.00 cost to the property owner with the city paying the balance.

2. Paving, curb and gutter at $1.50 per running foot cost to the property owner. A 100-foot lot would mean only $150.00 to the property owner with the city bearing all other costs.

Arrangements can be made to pay the cost on the installment plan.

Mixup on Bill Signed Into Law

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — It was discolored Tuesday that Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller had signed a bill into law against the rules of the Arkansas Legislature because of an oversight.

Rockefeller signed a bill March 16 giving state banks the same tax consideration as national banks although Rep. Bill Wells had given notice of reconsideration when the bill passed on the last day before the two-week recess started March 10.

That meant that the bill could not be delivered to the governor until Tuesday, the last day of the three legislative days given to bring up a bill for reconsideration after notice is given.

House Speaker Sterling R. Cockrill said the measure had been delivered to the governor along with others for his signature.

Annexation in Pulaski Advanced

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Pulaski County Special School District board voted Tuesday to annex the district to the Little Rock District if suitable terms can be worked out.

The county district is the state's largest with more than 25,000 pupils. Little Rock is the second largest. The two districts, if combined would have about 50,000 pupils.

Several years ago the county board proposed consolidating with Little Rock, but the Little Rock board rejected this proposal because it would have meant dissolving both boards and forming a new one.

Under the annexation proposal, the Little Rock board would run the district.

Fire Bombs Set Off Oil Near Britain

By COLIN FROST
LAND'S END, England (AP) — The Royal Air Force strapped napalm fire bombs onto a squadron of Hunter jet fighters this morning, waiting the order to strike what was left of the Torrey Canyon and her cargo of oil.

Fires set by navy bombers and fed by gasoline drums dropped Tuesday had gone out, it was evident by dawn today. The huge tanker, which went aground on the Seven Stones Reef during a gale March 18, appeared to be nearly gone. Only part of the hull and the dent of Hempstead, employee of Ideal Cement Co. for 33 years and a member of the Church of Christ.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Ruth Hill Rosenbaum, a daughter, Mrs. Helen Ruth Shaw of Nashville, a brother, Louie Rosenbaum of Dallas.
Services will be at 3 p.m. Wednesday at Saratoga Church of Christ by Woodrow Plyler. Burial by Latimer Funeral Home will be in Saratoga Cemetery.

Navy Minister Maurice Foley flew over the wreck in a helicopter before deciding whether to bomb it again in an attempt to burn more of the oil. Royal Navy Buccaneer bombers scored 23 direct hits with 1,000 bombs on the broken ship Tuesday, sending a pillar of smoke and flame 8,000 feet above the wreckage. Another 18 of the 1,000-pounders were dropped around the vessel. Next came Hawker Hunter fighter-bombers, showering tank loads of aviation fuel and potassium chlorate incendiaries onto the huge oil slick. About two hours after the first strike the flames died down and the planes were called in again. A second attack set the fires going again. By nightfall the flames had disappeared and a massive pall of smoke hung over the reef.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson, vacationing on the nearby Scilly Isles, was among thousands of Britons who watched as the bombers pounded the broken tanker.

Home Secretary Roy Jenkins said that when the bombers struck it as estimated that 12 million gallons of the Torrey Canyon's cargo of 35.8 million gallons of crude oil remained inside the shattered hull.

Jenkins said the main problem was getting oxygen into the hold to feed combustion.

He said the government decided Monday night to blow up the Torrey Canyon after it became evident she was beyond salvage and could not be towed out into the Atlantic to be sunk. It was reported earlier that the government delayed the bombing until the owners decided the ship was a total loss, since she was aground on the high seas and beyond the jurisdiction of British maritime law.

Jenkins said the government's action was ruled by the need to fight pollution of Britain's shores, and financial considerations were not taken into account. The ship was insured for $16.5 million.

The disaster has touched off demands for international action on the problem of oil pollution at sea and adoption of measures to prevent another such incident.

Four Schools Are Losing Federal Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four more Southern school districts and two additional colleges have been ruled ineligible for federal financial assistance because of failure to comply with desegregation requirements, the Health, Education and Welfare Department announced today.

The school districts are For-dyce, Ark., Camden County, Ga., and Yazoo City municipal separate and Holly Bluff Line consolidated, both in Mississippi.

The colleges are Marion Institute, Marion, Ala., and Free-will Baptist Bible College, Nashville, Tenn.

Secretary of Welfare John W. Gardner said he approved the cut-off of eligibility for federal funds under provisions of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

Gardner said he acted only after extensive efforts to achieve voluntary compliance failed.

Reports on the six latest decisions were forwarded to appropriate congressional committees in letters dated Monday. Under law the terminations become effective 30 days after the committees receive their reports.

Speaker at Kiwanis Meet

Royalty Refuses Any Comment

LONDON (AP) — Buckingham palace refused to comment today on a petition from about 30 members of St. James's Anglican church at Stoke-on-Trent asking Queen Elizabeth II to withhold permission for her cousin to remarry after his wife divorces him for adultery.

44-year-old first cousin, is to be heard next week. The earl has announced he hopes to marry the co-respondent, Patricia Tuckwell, who has had a son by him.
Under Britain's royal marriages act of 1771, Lord Harewood, 18th in line of succession to the throne, is theoretically required to ask the queen's permission to marry.

Television and Radio

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

AP Television-Radio Writer NEW YORK (AP) — A favorite technique used in television documentaries — particularly when the subject is vast, complicated or dull — is to reduce the whole thing to a microcosm.

The war in Vietnam? Tell the story in terms of one soldier. Heart surgery? Build the program about one case.

Monday night NBC served up a short course in Russian history in terms of one beautiful, historic city — Leningrad. The program went far to explain the Russian character and recall the long period when the people were subjugated and exploited by their rulers. It was illustrated by stunning film of the palaces, churches and museums of the former imperial capital started 250 years ago on the whim of a czar and built largely by serf labor.

As the camera rambled over the magnificent buildings, moved into closeups of golden altars or peered down canals, the narration told of court intrigue, assassination and concern for the people's welfare.

There was Peter the Great, imaginative enough to dream of the city St. Petersburg, but cruel enough to have his son arrested and convicted of treason. There was Elizabeth, the vain and fun-loving czarina who built a pleasure palace and loved masquerade parties. And Catherine I, the German princess who had her weak Russian husband murdered, but whose taste in art and architecture resulted in the great Hermitage Museum — and Paul I, the son she loathed, who was strangled by his own officers.

By the time the narrator reached Nicholas II, last of the Romanoffs, the background of the 1917 Bolshevik revolution had been amply explored. The program was a treat.

A one-character drama, "The Human Voice," starring Ingrid Bergman will be the ABC "Stage 67" program May 4, producer Hubbell Robinson said Monday.

Next season, however, the series will have no regular spot in the schedule. Robinson said he is negotiating for various properties, but could not say whether there would be 8 or 18 shows next season.

ABC, now plans to lace its Sunday and Wednesday night movie reruns next season with occasional taped dramatic shows.

On April 20, ABC plans to shift "That Girl," Marlo Thomas' comedy series, into a Thursday night spot following "Be-witched" where it will remain through next season. "Love on a Rooftop," which is not renewed, will follow it through summer reruns.

Good or bad, however, the cord gets constant abuse. It is pulled on, stepped on, bent, twisted, pinched, cut, scraped and knotted. It's no wonder it breaks down.

Plugs are often molded affairs of flimsy material which crack and break easily. Some are not sturdy enough to hold the screws that hold the metal prongs in them.

What wears out a cord quickest is yanking on a wire to disconnect a plug. Neither the fine-stranded wire, thin insulation nor molded plug are made to take this kind of abuse. For longer cord and plug life, grasp the plug itself when disconnecting.

Floor lamps with bases that

An electric cord will last longer if treated well.

are flush to the floor are another hazard to cords. Every time you move the lamp, you cut a little deeper into the cord. Reinforce the insulation with a winding of tape and inspect the cord frequently.

Cord Life Hints

Do not allow loose wires to spread out over the floor where they can be walked on or tripped over. Clip them to the baseboard or shorten by wrapping around a nonmetallic object. Plastic devices are sold for this purpose.

Do not run cords under rugs. They are still being walked on and there is the increased danger of shorts going undetected and starting a fire in the rug.

Cords on appliances that heat up should be kept clear of the appliance. These include irons, electric fry pans, broilers, room heaters, hot plates. The least that can happen is a charring of the insulation.

When plugs crack and break, do not attempt to tape

YOUTH ASKED FOR IT!

This column is for young people, their problems and pleasures, their troubles and fun. As with the rest of Helen Help Us!, it welcomes laughs but won't dodge a serious question with a brush off.

FORGET THE PAST

I married the most wonderful man in the world. He's so wonderful that he wants to be the father of my son, even though he isn't, and he knows it.

You see, I fell hard for a smooth talker, and, of course, he left me. A month later I met Jon, and, though he knew I was expecting a baby, he wanted to marry me anyway. It wasn't out of pity, but because we truly love each other.

But, Helen, what do I tell my child? Should I be honest and let him know that my husband isn't his real father? I don't think he'd ever find out, as most people think Jon and I were "premature," which is a hard enough cross to bear. —LUCKY IN LOVE

Dear Lucky:

Your son has his "real" father now. Why chance confusing and hurting him by the "truth" which might only be told to ease your own conscience?

A baby born to a married couple is "presumed" the child of both — unless the fact of fatherhood is challenged; and that isn't likely in your case. Nor is it likely that your son will ever know.

However, this is a matter you and your husband must decide between you. My opinion is most certainly not advised! —H.

P.S. You truly ARE "Lucky in Love."

Dear Helen:

Could you please again give the national address of "Parents Without Partners," the club for divorced or widowed parents? Will a stamped self-addressed envelope to this organization bring the address of the local club nearest your city? —LONELY

The address of "Parents Without Partners" is, 80 - 5th Ave., New York, New York, and the organization will be glad to send you local addresses or help you start a club in your area. —H.

Dear Helen:

I love this divorced woman and want to marry her, but a year ago she said, though she loved me, she wouldn't want to burden me with her six children. We continued friends until she met an 18-year-old boy through her teenage daughter. This kid gave her a long story about being abandoned by his parents, so she took him in and has been keeping him ever since.

Her children dislike him, but she wants to "adopt" him. I am being forced out of her life. The other day he told me to get out and never come back again. When I call, he answers the phone and won't let her talk to me.

She had money and a good job, and I think she is being taken. What can I do? —T.Y.A.

Dear T:

There's little you can do but check the boy's background. Even if you prove he's a leech, however, don't expect your friend to believe you. When a middle-aged woman "adopts" a young man, the one thing she won't accept is — the truth. —H.

Dear Helen:

You say you couldn't find 30 denier nylons in local stores. I carry them in my hosiery center, but the demand for them is almost nil. The sad truth is that women turn their noses up at anything but ultra-sheer, even though the "serviceweight" wear many times as long. —MRS.M.S.

Dear Mrs. S:

If "serviceweight" were relabeled "longwear sheers" I'll bet your 30 denier stock would be gone in a week. The name's the thing! —H.

Dear Helen:

I pity these poor women who say they're divorced or widowed and so-o-o lonely. They'll jump right smack into the big middle of a disastrous marriage for they'll take the first man who comes along. Here's advice from one who knows — because she did. Now I'm divorced the second time and wiser. And I'm having a ball! I wouldn't get married again unless I had absolute proof that the man was 99.44 percent perfect, and what man is?

I go out often, enjoy male friendships, am involved in charity and civic work, have a good job, enjoy my children (I can, now that I'm not avidly man-hunting) and know at the end of the day I don't have to cater to male whims unless I wish. I'm my own woman — AND LOVING IT!

This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're having kid trouble, or just plain trouble, let Helen help YOU. She will also welcome your own amusing experiences. Address Helen Bottel in care of Hope Star, Copyright, 1967, Inc.

'Facial' Enhances Hands

Part of the beauty routine for hands should be a "facial" at least once a week. Just before retiring, bathe them thoroughly in lukewarm water, spread on cream and work smoothly into the skin. Give those cuticles a fair going over, too.

Cologne Is Substitute

If you're on a trip and discover you've forgotten your hair setting lotion or gel, use a substitute. A dab or spray of cologne before setting will do the same job. Not only will the cologne dry quickly but it will give you the added bonus of hair subtly scented by your favorite fragrance.

LET'S TALK ABOUT MOVIES

By VELDA SEAMANS

Tonite's your last chance to enjoy the perfect woman's picture, "Madame X" which we brought back because so many said they wanted to see it again. Bring your handkerchief!

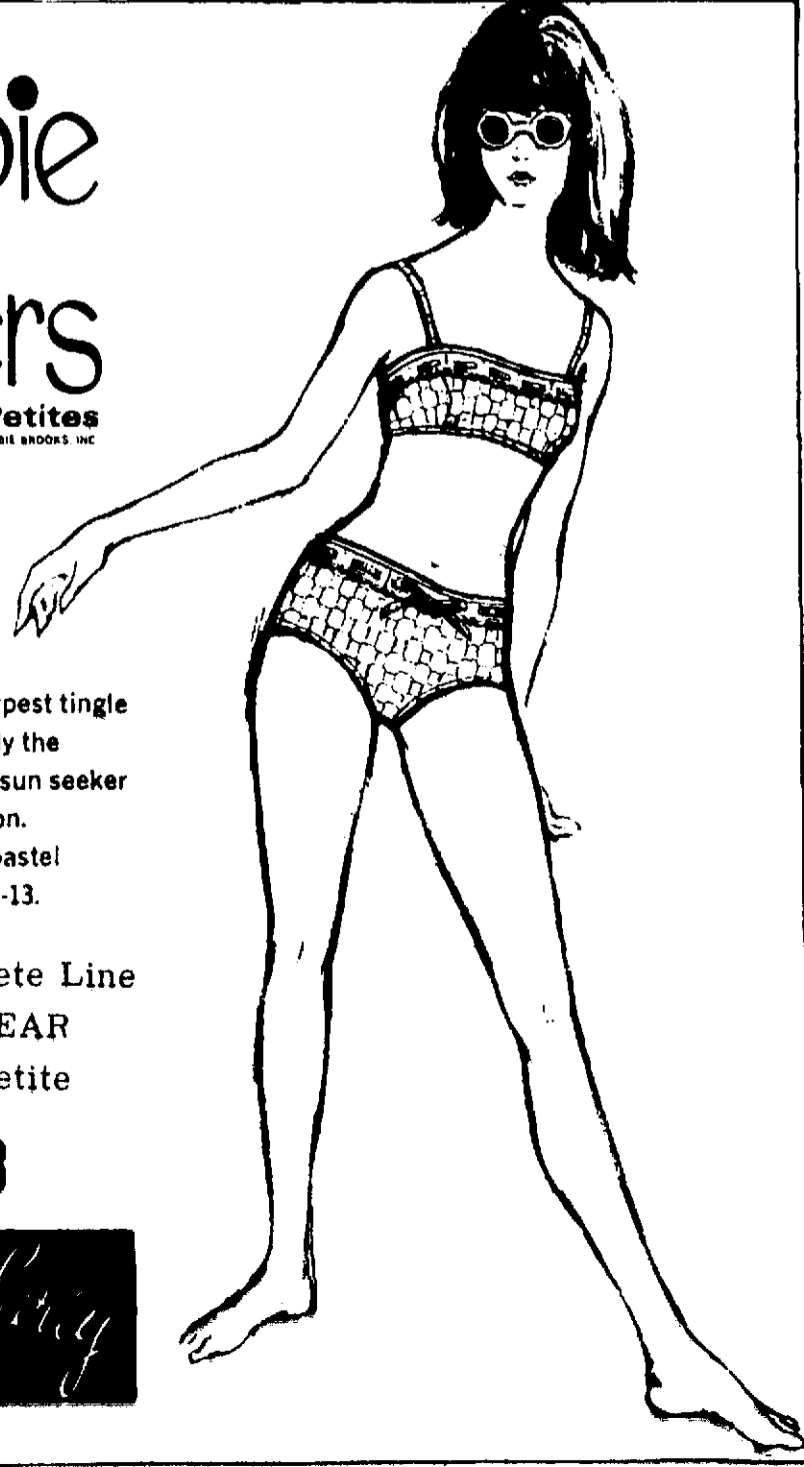

Friday, Saturday country music's comin to the Dixie Drive in with the first local showing of "Road to Nashville". It would take the whole page to list all the top singers in this one. With it you'll see "The Secret Seven", a picture we guarantee has as much action as any we've offered in a long long time. It's a good show.

Starting Sunday we will bring the roadshow attraction — "The Weird World of LSD". We have been reading about this drug that is causing so much trouble, but now we can learn just what it is all about in this true story. All of us mothers and fathers should see this show at the Dixie Sunday Monday and Tuesday. On the same program we will show the story of the fight necessary to beat the drug habit — "Synanom" — the name of the famous drug clinic in California. I'm sure we'll all have a better understanding, and perhaps a bit more fear of the drug evil when we see this show.

Next Tuesday the Saenger will bring back another popular film called the "Art of Love". It stars James Garner, Elke Sommer, Dick Van Dyke and lots more big names, and is really a funny film for all. If you just want to enjoy yourself take it in.

We're really proud of the snow we have coming. April 13 — "Elvis in Easy Come Easy Go" — April 16 Disney's Fighting Prince of Donegal and Johnny Appleseed; April 23 "The Professionals" one of the best Westerns we've ever played — a truly great one; April 30th — "The Greatest Story Ever Told" first time at one half the roadshow prices. Spring time is really movie time! ! !

California Quake Due

A CLOSE WATCH is being kept on the fault by technologists at listening posts indicated on the map at right. Pictured above, they analyze seismograph readings and ground disturbances caused by the many minor quakes in the area each year. Above, one such quake displaced an asphalt road five inches. Building codes have been adopted, which hopefully will cut down on loss of life and property if the big quake comes.

Californians are warned that a major earthquake is likely sometime before the year 2,000, due to the restless San Andreas fault which has shifted 16 feet over the past century. The question remains whether cities, such as Los Angeles and San Francisco, are ready for a quake even larger than the one in 1906 that took hundreds of lives in the San Francisco Bay area.

Some Older Persons in Peace Corps

By TOM SEPPY
WASHINGTON (AP) — The public may think of Peace Corpsmen mostly as low-paid, college-age idealists. But there is opportunity to serve — at pretty fair wages — for older men and women with management know-how.

Take Dr. Stephen Dachl, chairman of a department at the University of Kentucky's College of Dentistry. He'll be going to South America July 1 to help direct the Peace Corps program in Colombia.

Dr. Dachl is one of 70 persons — chosen from 5,500 applicants — who'll be replacing Peace Corps staff personnel overseas in the next six months at salaries up to $23,000 a year.

One of the reasons they're changing jobs is Margaret M. Conroy, an attractive 30-year-old former New Yorker who has been the Peace Corps' chief talent scout since Dec. 6.

"Things have really been hectic during these past few months," she said in an interview. "We've received 1,500 applications for jobs from people around the country. And we have about 4,000 applications from returning volunteers."

Miss Conroy, whose official title is director of the Peace Corps talent search, heads a staff of 11, including 4 interviewers.

Their job: Recruit people with the ability to administer Peace Corps programs.

Staff members serve as Foreign Service officers under a 30-month contract. Although a second 30-month tour is possible, staff members by design do not have career tenure as do civil service employees.

Salaries start at $7,500 and depend on the person and his experience, not necessarily the job.

Miss Conroy says her staff is well advanced in filling the 70 vacancies for overseas jobs which will begin opening July 1. There also will be 24 openings in Washington.

Miss Conroy said she has made two recruiting changes since taking over:

— Interviewers have gone to major cities to talk with interested applicants. Previously, all interviewing was done in Washington.

— One recruiter concentrates only on women and minority groups such as Negroes and Mexican-Americans.

'CASABLANCA' TO STAGE
NEW YORK (AP) — Two Broadway musical veterans, Arthur Schwartz and Leo Robin, are teaming for a song-and-dance stage version of the famous Humphrey Bogart movie, "Casablanca."

The production is scheduled for premiere Oct. 23 under sponsorship of Schwartz and Julius J. Epstein. Casting has not been announced.

Among shows which Schwartz has composed are "Three's a Crowd" and "The Band Wagon," while Robin has penned lyrics for works including "Hit the Deck" and "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

Newsboys Bill Opposed by AFL-CIO

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — J. Bill Becker said today that the Arkansas State AFL-CIO opposes a bill that allows children to work as newsboys because the bill provides the boys no protection under Workmen's Compensation.

Becker, president of the state organization, issued a clarifying statement today, saying that the news media had apparently interpreted his statement Monday as meaning that the organization opposed the bill because it allowed children to work.

The measure, sponsored by the Arkansas Press Association and pending in the Arkansas Senate, would exempt newsboys from the child labor laws.

Becker said today that his was just the surface of the bill. The measure would make them independent contractors and therefore provide no protection if they are injured or killed on the job, Becker said.

The children should be allowed some protection, he said.

HOUSE GIVES From Page One

beating down an attempt by Rep. Bill Wells of Hermitage to amend it to take the Purchasing Department out of the new agency.

The offices of the state comptroller, budget, accounting, audit and purchasing will be combined in the new department, which will be headed by a director appointed by the governor.

Reps. W. H. Thompson of Marked Tree, Talbot Feild of Hope and Jack S. Oakes of Augusta, members of the Old Guard, threw their support behind the measure.

"I'm not talking about politics," Thompson said. "I'm talking about the growth of this state."

"I think it will reflect credit on this legislature to give Gov. Rockefeller the opportunity to do what he tells the people he can do," Feild said.

Some legislators expressed doubt that the bill would save as much money its supporters said it would. Some estimates were as high as $5 million a year.

"It's so odd that we come in here and say we are going to save a lot of money by fixing up something to spend a lot of money," said Rep. John Miller of Melbourne.

Wells amended the bill setting up the Personnel Division to remove the department director's authority to change the salary classification of any employee. The amendment also specifies that various departments would not have to cooperate with the job classification and pay study to be conducted by the division if the study "would hinder the normal and efficient duties and functions of said department or employee."

The bill was sent back to the Senate for concurrence in the amendment.

The motor vehicle inspection measure passed after a "sounding of the bell" in which one vote cast for the bill was challenged successfully.

Rep. Gene Rainwater of Fort Smith said the bill, which meets minimal federal requirements, would state the state from losing $4.5 million in federal money.

Other legislators said, however, they thought the proposal was unworkable.

The bill authorizes the State Police to license inspection stations that would inspect cars annually for a $1.75 fee.

It was sent back to the Senate for concurrence in an amendment that made some exemptions from inspections.

Both the House and Senate approved a raft of budget bills, including one by the House to fund the Department of Administration.

The representatives approved an appropriation of $92,660,000 in the first year of the biennium and $102 million the second year for the state Education Department after assuring fearful legislators that the money was enough to give teachers the $500-a-year raises.

Street Crimes Are Termed a Disgrace

By STEPHEN M. AUG
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson pictures Americans as living in a "climate of fear" generated by crime in the streets. U.S. crime statistics, he says, are "our national disgrace."

Johnson made the statements Tuesday night in calling for speedy enactment of his anti-crime legislation, terming it "fundamental to the safety of the individual, the security of the home and the enduring stability of our great society."

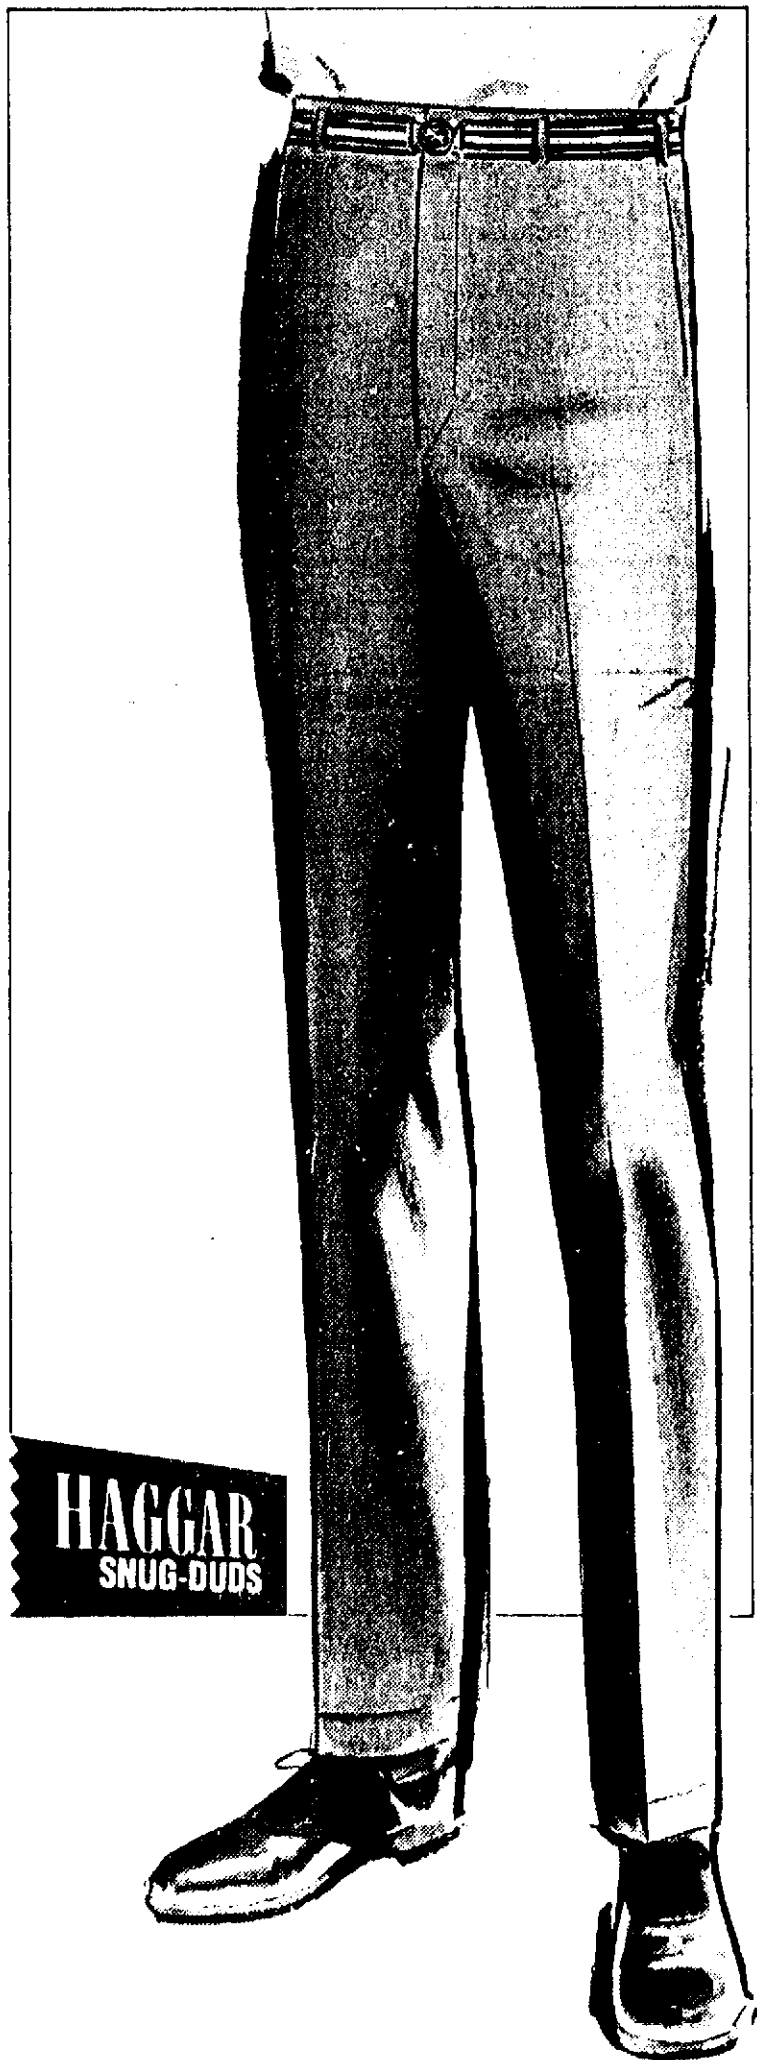

Addressing about 600 law enforcement and court officials, participants in the National Conference on Crime Control, Johnson said "white collar" crimes—petty theft, embezzlement, consumer fraud and anti-trust violations—"dwarf all crimes of violence" in purely economic terms.

"The grim statistics of our crime record is our national disgrace," he said. But more important than any figures on crime, he added, is "the climate of fear that crime creates."

Johnson aimed some of his remarks directly at the police officials, judges and investigators in his audience.

The conference seeks to spark implementation of the more than 200 recommendations made by the President's National Crime Commission in its report last month.

"Many of you are on the front lines in the fight against crime," Johnson said. "You know the drudgery and you know the danger of that fight, and the occasional small triumphs that really make it all very worthwhile."

Why Does George Check Outstanding Claims Daily?

He doesn't have to. Most agents don't. Many agents simply mail loss reports to the Company and forget them. They think by some magic formula all will turn out well. George knows it doesn't work that way. He knows that in spite of good intentions of the Company to pay promptly, sometimes things can go wrong. A report might be lost in the mail, a doctor's bill isn't mailed, needed estimates aren't furnished by the claimant, the insured misses an appointment with the adjuster. George figures he is paid to take care of all the details, and to follow through on every claim. So he does, every day.

Newlyweds' First Home Should Be New

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Should a young couple buy an old or a new house? That is the question put by an engaged couple who has enough money for a down payment on a big old house that needs to be repaired or a small new house.

The groom-to-be is all for the old house idea because he'd "have lots of fun remodeling it," he says. His bride-to-be doesn't want "to inherit anyone else's dirt." She'd like everything spanking clean.

There's a lot to be said for buying the new house, the first time around, unless one can find an old house that has been kept in tip-top repair. Many things can go haywire in a new house, but an old house can supply one headache after another. A seasoned homeowner could attempt coping with an old house, but a bride shouldn't have a leaky roof ruining her new love

A retired couple has a problem of another sort. They've bought a home in the South, and can't decide what to do with the furnishings in their northern apartment. They expected to ship everything South to the smaller vacation house, except those things that wouldn't fit, planning to sell the leftovers. Friends advise that they should sell everything, and buy all new furniture when they get to the new home.

"This would be a tremendous wrench for us as we've lived with so long," says the lady of the house, "and we've discovered we'll get very little for some of these overstuffed pieces."

The answer must boil down to dollars and cents as well as sentiment. First, one must establish the cost of shipping furniture to the retirement home and how much new furniture would cost. This should be sized up right down to blinds for the windows. Stores in the new area could supply catalogs with styles and prices.

People want to furnish with lighter-colored furniture in warmer climates. If present furniture can be painted, antiqued, silvered, slipcovered, it may provide a pleasant appearance in the warmer climate. Upholstered pieces could be slipcovered in white or pastel cottons. Occasional tables might be done in new lacquers, pastels, gold or silver finishes, and so on. If upholstered pieces seem too heavy for the climate, they could be discarded as one can afford to replace pieces.

The trend in decorating today permits getting a beautiful new look out of some well-used furniture.

One retiring couple, who can well afford to refurnish their new retirement home, planned to have a sale of all their furnishings until their children began squabbling over the idea.

They are closing up an antiqued-laden, 14-room house and moving to a modern house that they plan to furnish in contemporary style.

"I had no idea how much these old furnishings meant to our children," says one parent. "There were a few family heirlooms, silver, linens and some paintings that we planned to pass on to the youngsters; but other objects we had bought at auctions, and so on, didn't seem to be important enough from a sentimental standpoint. Now, they've become terribly emotional about it all."

The fact is that the couple in their mid-sixties has made some wise investments, but they think the extra thousands realized from the sale of furnishings might supply additional cushioning in the bank.

Children should be content with the few things they covet and can't bear to see go under an auctioneer's gavel, and parents should explain their reason for holding on to every penny at this point.

MOST WANTED LIST includes an efficient, decorative kitchen. Surveys show that women want a room that offers ample counter space, storage and areas for eating and entertainment. Early American theme here is carried out with traditional hardware on natural wood cabinets, box beam ceiling, fireplace and red brick embossed linoleum floor.

Comfy Kitchen

By AILEEN SNODDY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—"I live in my kitchen" is a revealing womanly comment on how little certain housewifely duties have changed through the years.

Despite the increase in working women their place in the kitchen remains similar to that of grandmother or great-grandmother. But there is a slight difference.

With mouth-watering interest in gourmet cooking a woman no longer feels isolated from her husband and children. Often he is by her side whipping up his favorite salad or dessert.

The old family-sized kitchen is in great demand in new houses. But now it is updated with efficient and decorative equipment. The basic idea of a family kitchen is as sound today as it was 75 years ago. To back up this opinion Mrs. Margaret Gordon Dana, chief interior designer for Armstrong Cork Co., first comments historically on the American kitchen. Then she sketches her ideas for a livable family kitchen.

Mrs. Dana points out that our kitchens always were large and spacious until the cubbyhole era started as an economy measure just after World War II.

In many city apartments, cut up to gain more rental units, women still put up with these tiny kitchens. Not their more fortunate sisters.

"In the late '50s," Mrs. Dana continues, "families with more money to spend on housing demanded bigger kitchens."

Such kitchens provide, she says, "a do-everything room." A kitchen isn't just a place to prepare food. "There should be room to entertain a neighbor, keep an eye on small children, sit down with the family to a meal, read, watch TV or relax in a rocking chair."

A kitchen that meets this criteria has space for a sit-down dining area, pantry facilities and full-height shelves for storing canned goods and house supplies. A convenient outside entrance is a must, she feels.

She chose to decorate her model kitchen with an Early American theme. It includes a raised hearth fireplace and the traditional open-beam ceiling and brick floor. Both ceiling and floor are modern reproductions of traditional materials. For example, the floor is a red brick design in embossed linoleum and the ceiling is a suspended acoustical system with false beams. "These are integrated into the suspension assembly."

Mrs. Dana's model kitchen fulfills another requirement other than being comfortable and decorative. It will be efficient, too, she says. All the appliances except the refrigerator are built-in. An island housing the dishwasher and sink divides the kitchen work area from the family area. It also frees counter space near the range for food preparation.

The model kitchen scheme fits all requirements of a traditional family-sized kitchen, she feels.

Joan Crosby's TV Notebook

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico—(NEA)—Even an actor as talented and respected as Lee J. Cobb has problems.

He began his career as "the lowest comedy cop anyone ever played" and found himself stuck in comedy for too long because agents and producers felt he couldn't do anything else.

Then he succeeded in breaking through and playing dramatic roles, only to be overlooked for comedy because agents and producers felt he couldn't do anything else.

Now he has re-created his Broadway triumph as Willy Loman in Arthur Miller's powerful and moving Death of a Salesman and scored such a smash CBS-TV will repeat the play on Sunday, April 2. Simultaneously, he

... full of indescribable emotions may be seen in the nation's movie theaters playing a comic role in 20th Century-Fox's "In Like Flint."

"Now with Flint and Salesman playing simultaneously," he said, "they are probably saying, 'But can he do anything in between?'"

Cobb was in San Juan to attend the premiere of "In Like Flint," in which he once again plays James Coburn's chief. One scene in the film, a very un-Willy Loman piece, has Cobb dressed in drag, attempting to infiltrate a woman's beauty farm.

Twice—once in the theater, and once when Sammy Davis Jr. introduced him before Sammy's performance at the El San Juan Hotel—Cobb received standing ovations from the crowds.

Mention to him that it's reassuring to see that the public does indeed recognize talent and he smiles and says, "Either that or a well-turned ankle."

In a more serious vein (and for fans of his acting, it might be a surprise to know how humorous and twinkly-eyed Cobb is), he said the two ovations were "very heartwarming. I was touched because they were completely unexpected."

He says he was very pleased with Death of a Salesman "on several scores. First, it was done on and for television. If something appears on the tube, it is automatically endowed with a certain legitimacy. Then, 18 years had passed since I first did the play, and to revisit it was full of indescribable emotions."

Cobb says he has not seen The Virginian since he left the series. But he agrees that possibly his exposure in that series might have been responsible for drawing such a large audience to the telecast of Death of a Salesman. "However, I'm not going to poll the audience to find out."

In a strange way, his time in that show has made him more popular than ever, by bringing him into millions of homes across the country. Before that, he was known in his industry as one of its finest actors, and he had a large number of faithful fans. But his name was not a household name. Now it is.

"If, in this business," he said, "you waited for just what you believe in with a passion, you would need a separate source of income. In a comparative sense, I have had a relatively rewarding career so far. I have actually enjoyed some of the things I have done."

LIVING THEATER RETURNS
NEW YORK (AP)—The Living Theater, an experimental group which went to Europe in 1964 following income tax troubles here, is returning next fall for a limited engagement.

The company, headed by Julian Beck and his wife, Judith Malina, will display five plays developed during travels abroad. In the meantime a final settlement of tax matters is being negotiated.

Statements in Book Are Denied

By GEORGE ESPER
NEW YORK (AP) — The Defense Department denies statements in William Manchester's book that President Johnson had not been advised on procedures for ordering nuclear retaliation in the event of an attack following the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Security officials in the Kennedy administration also denied that Johnson had not been briefed, The U.S. atomic attack code was carried in a football-shaped satchel that lay in the presidential jet which took Johnson and the body of Kennedy back to Washington from Dallas Nov. 22, 1963.

Kennedy officials said that at the late president's insistence Johnson had been familiarized thoroughly on the contents of the satchel.

Manchester says in the book, "The Death of a President": "The difficulty was that Johnson had no idea of what was in the bag. He knew that it existed, but he hadn't been briefed about the contents, and if the thunderbolt of all-out war struck that afternoon, the country's retaliatory arsenal could be spiked until he had been led through Taz Shepard's primers for the first time."

Capt. Tazewell Shepard was a military aide to President Kennedy.

Manchester also writes: "Had Russia attacked across the DEW line, the greatest military establishment in the history of the world might easily have been musclebound during the 15 fateful minutes of warning time and perhaps even afterward, when second-strike capacity became a factor."

A spokesman for the Defense Department issued a statement Tuesday saying:

"The statements carried by the press services attributed to William Manchester bearing on the nuclear readiness of the United States on Nov. 22, 1963, were untrue."

"On that date, Lyndon Johnson, as vice president and as president, was fully aware of the procedures used to authorize the release of nuclear weapons in retaliation against attack on the United States."

Manchester also says there was a slowdown in commercial telephone service because of the great load of calls in the hours immediately following the assassination. He says phones in the Senate and House offices, the White House and the Signal Corps had been paralyzed temporarily.

According to Manchester's account, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy roamed the streets in Washington, trying the phones of strangers, until he got through to then-Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy, to learn if their brother was dead.

"It became obvious that in a national emergency this (telephone service) would be the first link to snap," Manchester writes.

Picket Lines Hit Major TV Networks

NEW YORK (AP) — The 18,000-member American Federation of Television and Radio Artists struck the major television and radio networks affecting live programs such as news shows and soap operas.

Picket lines went up shortly after 5 a.m. in front of the Columbia Broadcasting System, the National Broadcasting Co., the American Broadcasting Co., and the Mutual Broadcasting System, their affiliates in New York, in Chicago and in Los Angeles, and at advertising agencies.

It was the first national strike in AFTRA's 30-year history.

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Federation of Television and Radio Artists struck the major television and radio networks today, but supervisory personnel kept the networks on the air by taking over such programs as news shows.

In the first national strike in AFTRA's 30-year history, picket lines went up shortly after 5 a.m. in front of the Columbia Broadcasting System, the National Broadcasting Co., the American Broadcasting Co., and the Mutual Broadcasting System, their affiliates in New York, in Chicago and in Los Angeles, and at advertising agencies.

The dispute centers around 100 newsmen at network-owned stations in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles who are seeking a higher base salary and a larger return of commercial fees on sponsored programs on which they appear.

Two of the first big news shows to be affected by the strike were the NBC Today show from 7 a.m. till 9 a.m. and the CBS morning news with Joseph Benti from 7:05 a.m. till 7:30 a.m. In both cases, supervisory personnel took over the shows.

Military, Civil Contest in Vietnam

By JOHN LENGEL
SAIGON (AP) — One of South Vietnam's leading civilian politicians, Phan Khac Suu, announced his presidential candidacy today, setting the stage for a civilian-military contest in the Sept. 1 election.

Suu said his vice-presidential running mate would be another leading civilian, Dr. Phan Quang Dan.

Premier Nguyen Cao Ky and Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu, leaders of South Vietnam's ruling military junta, both have presidential ambitions. The currently dominant military power bloc wants one of its members elected although under the new constitution he must take off his uniform to run.

Informants say an informal show of hands at a recent meeting of the Armed Forces Council indicated Thieu was the military's favorite.

Other civilian tickets are expected to be announced.

Suu, 62, was made chief of state in October 1964 when the military attempted to create a facade of civilian rule. He resigned after eight months of military coups and other intra-governmental strife.

Judging from past performance, Suu could not be expected to follow the military line if elected. A military coup ousting him would wipe out a year's effort to advance South Vietnam toward democratic government, an effort the United States has strongly backed.

Before Suu's announcement, political analysts in Saigon anticipated that a strong military-civilian ticket would emerge. Though this is still possible, the candidacy of Suu and Dan joins two of the best known civilian possibilities.

Under the new constitution, which calls for a modified presidential form of government, the elected president appoints a premier as day-to-day chief of government. The premier in turn appoints a Cabinet which is subject to votes of confidence in the two-house legislature.

Suu, speaker of the Constituent Assembly, guided the body through a sometimes stormy seven-month session which produced the constitution.

He was educated in France as an engineer, was a minister in ex-emperor Bao Dai's first Cabinet in 1949, was the political representative of the once powerful Hoa Hao and Cao Dai sects, and was also a Cabinet minister under the late President Ngo Dinh Diem.

Both Suu and Dan were arrested in November 1960 after an unsuccessful attempt to overthrow Diem. They were released three years later when the military ousted Diem and murdered him.

Dan, 49, was educated as a physician in Paris and took a public health degree at Harvard.

Together they offer a combined appeal to the sectionalism which now is a major factor in South Vietnamese politics. Suu was born in a Mekong Delta village, deep in South Vietnam. Dan comes from Vinh, a city in the southern part of North Vietnam.

Ky, like most of the members of the ruling military junta, is a refugee from North Vietnam. Thieu is from central Vietnam, at the northern end of South Vietnam.

Suu, 62, was made chief of state in October 1964 when the military attempted to create a facade of civilian rule. He resigned after eight months of military coups and other intra-governmental strife.

Judging from past performance, Suu could not be expected to follow the military line if elected. A military coup ousting him would wipe out a year's effort to advance South Vietnam toward democratic government, an effort the United States has strongly backed.

Before Suu's announcement, political analysts in Saigon anticipated that a strong military-civilian ticket would emerge. Though this is still possible, the candidacy of Suu and Dan joins two of the best known civilian possibilities.

Under the new constitution, which calls for a modified presidential form of government, the elected president appoints a premier as day-to-day chief of government. The premier in turn appoints a Cabinet which is subject to votes of confidence in the two-house legislature.

Suu, speaker of the Constituent Assembly, guided the body through a sometimes stormy seven-month session which produced the constitution.

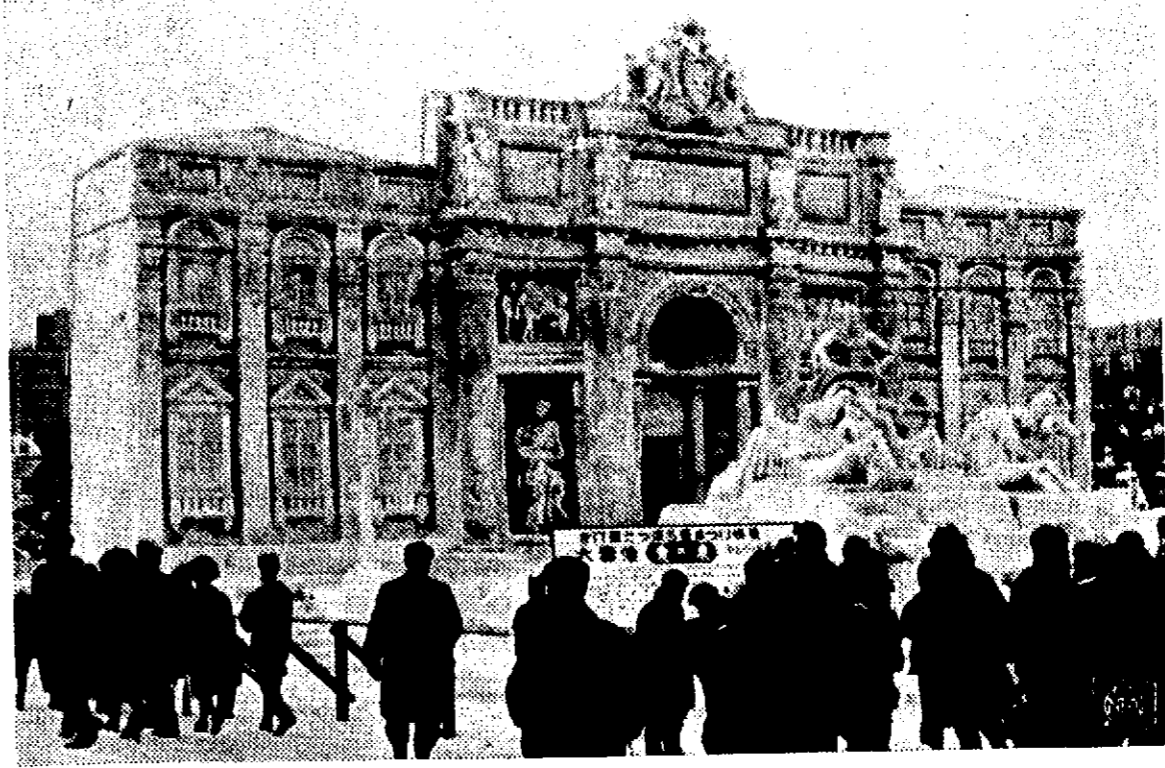

He was educated in France as an engineer, was a minister in ex-emperor Bao Dai's first Cabinet in 1949, was the political representative of the once powerful Hoa Hao and Cao Dai sects, and was also a Cabinet minister under the late President Ngo Dinh Diem.

Both Suu and Dan were arrested in November 1960 after an unsuccessful attempt to overthrow Diem. They were released three years later when the military ousted Diem and murdered him.

Dan, 49, was educated as a physician in Paris and took a public health degree at Harvard.

Together they offer a combined appeal to the sectionalism which now is a major factor in South Vietnamese politics. Suu was born in a Mekong Delta village, deep in South Vietnam. Dan comes from Vinh, a city in the southern part of North Vietnam.

Ky, like most of the members of the ruling military junta, is a refugee from North Vietnam. Thieu is from central Vietnam, at the northern end of South Vietnam.

SO WHAT'S NEW about the Fountain of Trevi in Rome, you ask. Nothing, except that this is a replica of the famous fountain, in Sapporo, Japan, made completely of snow.

Alaska, Iowa to Petition Convention

By WILLIAM T. PEACOCK
WASHINGTON (AP) — Alaska and Iowa appear the states most likely to next petition for a U.S. constitutional convention aimed at overturning the Supreme Court's one man-one vote ruling.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, R-Ill., the leading congressional critic of the court's ruling that each house of a state legislature must be apportioned by population, contends that if two more states petition for a convention, Congress must call one.

He is ready to offer the motion.

By his count, 32 states already have petitioned. But other congressmen dispute Dirksen's count because the states' documents vary. Article V of the Constitution says Congress shall call a convention on application from the legislatures of two-thirds of the states, or 34 of the present 50.

A petition from Alaska or Iowa is no sure thing.

In each, the House has approved a petition but the Senate has not acted. Observers in each state capital rate the possibility of favorable Senate action no better than 50-50.

An Associated Press survey indicates the issue is alive in four other states — Michigan, New York, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin.

State Sen. Thomas Schweigert, a Republican, introduced a petition resolution in Michigan Friday. Gov. George Romney has taken no position on it. But Romney helped write a provision of the 1963 Michigan constitution which required area to be a factor in establishing state Senate districts.

That provision was later thrown out in court and the Michigan Legislature was reapportioned on a very strict one man-one vote basis. Democrats, who led the fight for one man-one vote, won overwhelming control in 1964 but Republicans have now narrowly recaptured the legislature. The outlook is uncertain, however, for Schweigert's proposal.

Farms Milk Service and Anthony Pure Milk Co. announced their trucks would start rolling Thursday.

At Purity Dairies, a non-union plant, NFO picketing continued early today. Company officials said it was uncertain when deliveries would resume.

The middle Tennessee milk supply slowed to a trickle last Friday when Teamsters Union and Meatcutters Union members at Sealtest, Jersey Farm and Anthony began honoring NFO picket lines.

Nashville's fourth major dairy, Purity, shut down Saturday when rocks were hurled at a truck seeking to leave the plant. A day earlier, a sniper bullet had shattered a Purity truck windshield.

Hopes to Open Shipping Route

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government hopes to open the Arctic shipping route between Europe and Asia to other nations, Merchant Marine Minister Viktor G. Bakayev told a news conference. He mentioned no date.

The route, once known as the Northeast Passage, stretches from the North Sea near Norway along the north coast of Siberia to the Bering Sea near Alaska.

Beebe Jr. College Coach Quits

BEEBE, Ark. (AP) — Harold Callahan, basketball coach at Arkansas State Junior College at Beebe, announced today his resignation effective at the end of May.

Callahan said he was resigning because of the school's trend toward de-emphasis of its sports program.

Callahan, 26, compiled a 58-58 record in four years at the school following his graduation from Arkansas State University at Jonesboro.

His teams opposed freshman teams from Arkansas State and Memphis State as well as the Hendrix College varsity.

Callahan's record against three other junior colleges in the state was 21-4.

No successor has been named and Callahan said he had no immediate plans but that he would probably remain in coaching.

Europe and Asia to other nations, Merchant Marine Minister Viktor G. Bakayev told a news conference. He mentioned no date.

"We Service What We Sell"

'Operation Khrushchev'

By FRED SPARKS
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—The Soviet high command has updated and is prepared to put into effect—in the event of emergency—Nikita Khrushchev's four-year-old plan to destroy Peking's nuclear capacity and missile sites.

These steps come at a time when more and more Russians are quietly talking about Khrushchev as "the mah who warned us against China."

The plan—let's call it "Operation Khrushchev"—primarily would employ pro-Soviet, anti-Mao Chinese saboteurs. Some are inside China, others would infiltrate from Russia where they're now refugees.

During my recent assignment in Moscow I heard Russians, on all levels, mention Khrushchev's foresight. And I was told about Operation Khrushchev by seasoned Western diplomats. "If the Kremlin decided to strike," said one diplomat, "it would strike hard. I doubt if the Russians would let their people inside China down. This would not be a half-hearted Bay of Pigs operation."

If the pro-Soviet Chinese couldn't handle it they'd drop paratroopers. Russia has three times as many as America, all trained in free-falling, excellent for raiding."

I asked another diplomat: "What would trigger such drastic intervention?" "Self-protection," he replied, "Brezhnev and Kosygin seriously question Mao's stability just as Khrushchev did years ago. They fear, if cornered by his enemies, Mao might provoke sizable border skirmishes to distract attention."

If even minor battles commenced the Soviets couldn't be blamed for eliminating the nuclear missile sites in their front yard. Today Peking can lob from Sinkiang Province into Russia, or it could hit Russia with its Hiroshima-size atomic bomb delivered by conventional bomber.

"Remember how your President Kennedy reacted to missile sites in nearby Cuba?"

The Chinese can no more seal their borders against infiltrators than the United States can seal South Vietnam's borders. Furthermore, the Sino-Soviet border is 4,000 miles long and, in large part, primitive and mountainous.

Operation Khrushchev was revived at a time when every foreign correspondent in Moscow, including this writer, was trying to solicit the dictator's comments on the current Soviet-Chinese crisis. Khrushchev was the first Russian to say that, with Communist China as a friend, the Soviet Union didn't need any capitalist enemies—then he pushed "co-existence" with the West.

After he downgraded Stalin the Chinese praised Stalin and Khrushchev exploded.

NIKITA KHRUSHCHEV
He's out but his plan is in.

once and for all. When China's President Liu Shao-chi visited the Kremlin, Khrushchev snapped: "If you love Stalin I'll give him to you, cadaver, coffin and all!"

In 1962 Khrushchev ordered the KGB (Russia's CIA) to launch intelligence operations against China, to recruit and train agents. This was revealed four years ago at the Moscow trial of Soviet Intelligence Colonel Oleg Penkovsky. Penkovsky was convicted and shot for working for Western intelligence sources as a double-agent.

Khrushchev had the high command blueprint for Operation Khrushchev when the KGB reported that China had created its own atomic power, though such power was then in its infancy.

Fond of Churchillian phrases, Khrushchev considered "strangling the infant in its crib," but cooler heads prevailed.

All the recent correspondents' notes to induce Khrushchev to talk about China have gone unanswered. Khrushchev appears only on election day; the rest of the year he's the invisible man.

He has a pleasant suburban home and the address is obtainable. A Russian wouldn't chance it, but a foreigner can drive to the house. As he gets out, a burly policeman with a red arm band appears and the conversation goes like this:

"Who do you want to see?"
"Nikita Khrushchev."
"He doesn't live here."

Incidentally, average Russians, who know nothing of Operation Khrushchev, are still confused by Khrushchev's ouster, confused because there never was a plausible explanation. "We are as confused," the local saying goes, "as the sign hanger," which refers to this well-known story:

On Oct. 14, 1964, Moscow was being decorated to give a hero's welcome to a new Russian astronaut. A sign hanger, having just pasted pictures of Marx and Lenin on a fence, was halfway up the ladder with a picture of Khrushchev when a friend yelled: "I just heard it on the radio—Khrushchev is out."

Khrushchev is still very much out—but Operation Khrushchev is very much in.

The constitution of Liberia, African republic, is patterned after that of the United States.

POWER FROM THE NORTH will be flowing into British Columbia's Vancouver area when the huge Portage Mountain Dam on the Peace River is completed. Begun in 1961, the dam taps one of the most valuable hydroelectric generating sites in North America. The completed dam will be a mile long and a half-mile thick at the base with the largest underground powerhouse of its type in the world, three times larger than a football field. A lake 170 miles long and 70 miles wide will be backed up and power will reach Vancouver through a 574-mile transmission line.

Golf, Track Teams Are Improving

By RALPH ROUNTON

With determination and improvement strengthening their balances, the Hope High track and golf teams are almost ready to really show off their potential.

The track teams, heading many lists in the distance events and the relays, have that chance this afternoon, hosting a meet at the Hope track. Teams from Hope, Fouke, Spring Hill, and Ashdown will be participating.

The Junior High track team is becoming very worthy of recognition, as they have won 4 first and 1 second in the five meets they have entered. There is no trademark of this team, because there are no weak events for the Juniors. Yet, they do possess some outstanding individual athletes, which have several of the better performances in the entire state. Credit should also be given to the coaching staff. This very able staff has done a magnificent job with the thinclads, who are in the midst of their finest season ever.

The Hope High golf team is also looking forward to a fine year. With the district championships still a month away, the squad has proven themselves to be one of the best in 4AA. The team should be stronger also in the years to come, as this year's team is a young one. As the golfers improve, so should their margins of victory, because Hope is a very formidable opponent to any team that faces them.

The golfers' next match is scheduled for Saturday, as Hope entertains Magnolia, and the locals are in high hopes of seeking revenge for an earlier defeat at the hands of the Panthers.

This Loser Thinks Like a Winner

By ED SCHUYLER JR.

Associated Press Sports Writer NEW YORK (AP) — Fred Crawford is one of the losers, but he thinks like a winner.

Crawford, a New York Knickerbocker rookie, scored 26 points Tuesday night and played a fine floor game, but he readily admitted afterwards his jump shot is not up to National Basketball Association standards.

"I've got to work on it," he said. "I'm going over to the Boston dressing room and talk to Sam Jones."

Now there was a winning idea. Sam jumped all over Madison Square Garden Tuesday night and it seemed just about every time he hit the floor the Celtics had two more points. As a result, the Knicks were out of the NBA playoffs.

The final score was Boston 118, New York 109, with 51 of the Celtics' points — 38 from the field on 19 of 30 attempts and 13 of 17 free throws — made by jumping Jones.

The victory was the third against one loss for the Celtics in the best-of-5 Eastern Division semifinal series and it moved the defending champions into the best-of-7 final against

Game Meant Nothing But Proved Costly

By JOE MOOSHIL

Associated Press Sports Writer CHICAGO (AP) — Bobby Hull's run at Bobby Hull's record of 54 goals in one season probably has ended.

Chicago's Golden Jet was one of several victims in Tuesday night's "mean nothing" game against the Detroit Red Wings which the National Hockey League champion Black Hawks won with ease, 7-2.

But it was a costly victory. Defenseman Matt Ravlich was lost for the rest of the season because of a fractured left leg in the third period.

Hull, who was responsible for a 51-minute delay in the game when one of his blistering slapshots shattered the "unbreakable" glass behind the nets, had to leave the ice in the third period because of an injured left knee.

Doug Mohns reinjured his back in the rough-tough contest after which the Hawks kept mumbling to a man "what are they trying to prove?"

Hull, who scored a record 54 goals last season and has 52 this time around, might not see action in the final three games this week at Boston Thursday, at Montreal Saturday and at New York Sunday.

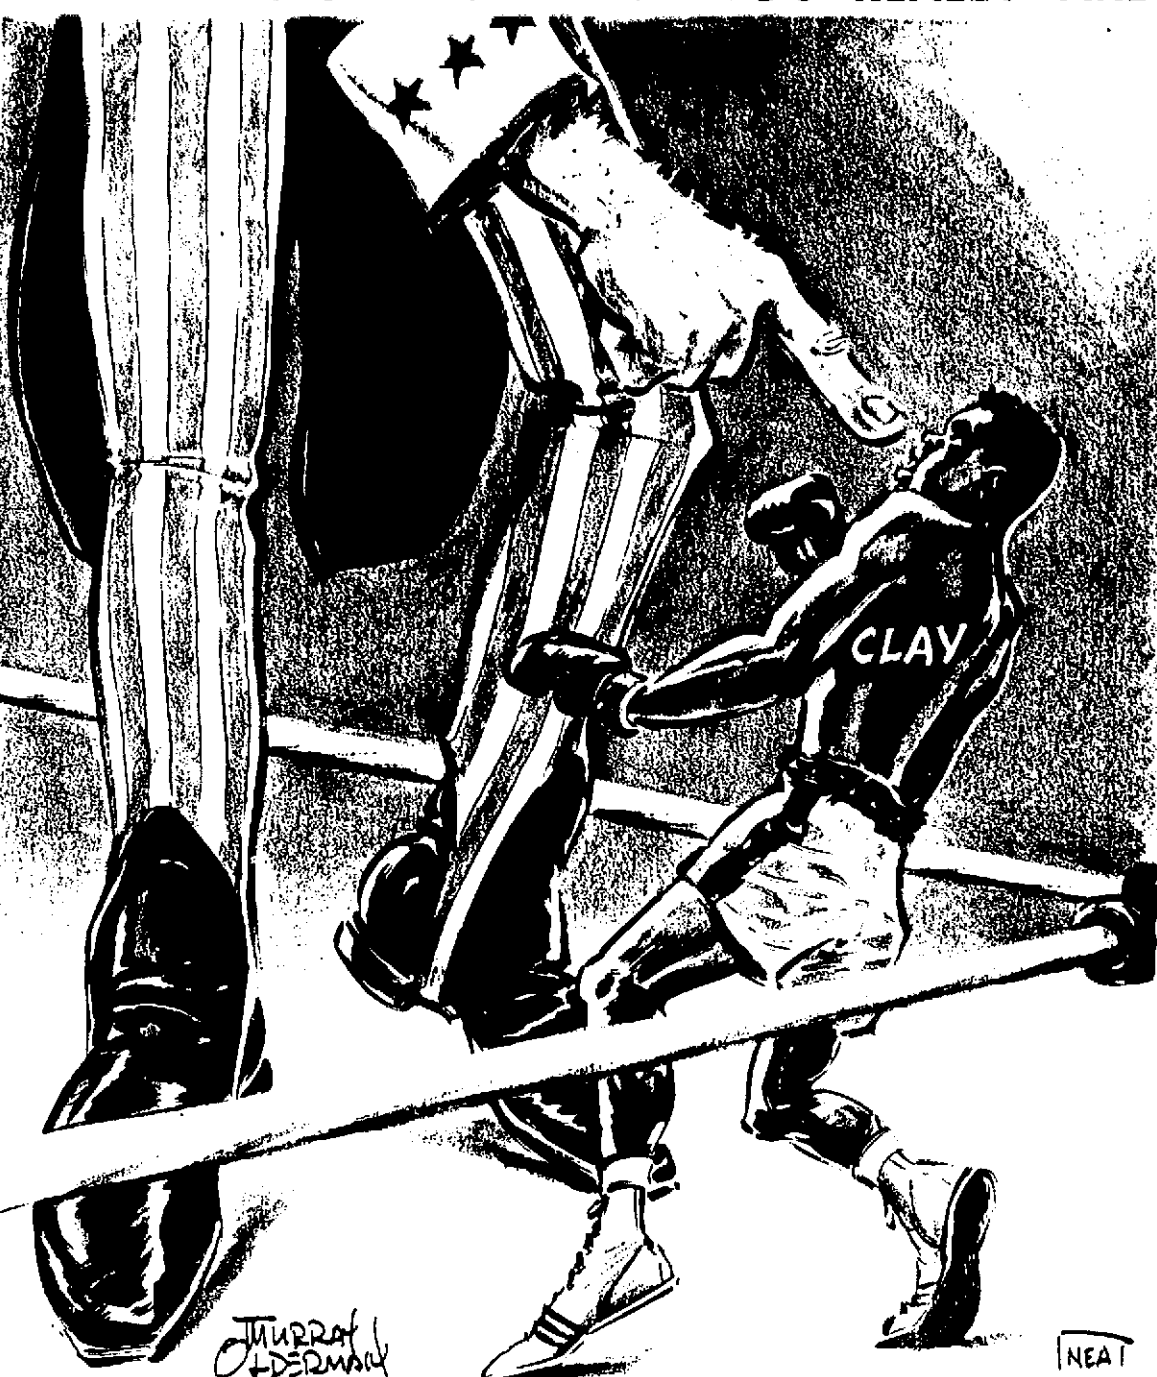

"I don't think it's too serious," said Coach Billy Reay "but I just might not use him the rest of the week. Why should I? We need him for the playoffs."

Meanwhile, the torrid race for second place resumes Wednesday night when Toronto and Montreal, tied for the runner-up spot with 71 points each, clash in Montreal and New York, a step behind with 70 points, is home against Detroit.

division-winning Philadelphia beginning Friday.

There is no action tonight. Western Division champion San Francisco hosts St. Louis Thursday in the opening of their best-of-7 set.

Although the dunk shot is a favorite among fans, players and some coaches, one of the rule makers believes the long-range response will be favorable.

"This has been a dramatic activity," said Clifford Fagan, secretary of the national policy-making group for amateur basketball in the United States and Canada.

"There might be some objection to prohibiting the dunk shot at first, but when they think about it and understand, I think everyone will feel that the change is good for the game," Fagan said.

Fagan said dunking the ball meant holding the ball above the basket and either dropping it or stuffing it through the net. He said the penalty for dunking will be loss of possession.

Fagan said the rule against dunking had no reference to any player but the new rule is certain to affect the style of 7-foot-1½ Lew Alcindor, who led UCLA to the NCAA national championship with his dunk shots.

UCLA Coach John Wooden said he was surprised and "a little disappointed" at the new rule.

"I am very much surprised, basically, because there has been no experimentation in this field," Wooden said. "Almost always the committee recommends a year or even two years of experimentation before a rule is changed."

Kentucky Coach Adolph Rupp, who doesn't allow his players to use the dunk shot, was pleased with the new rule.

"I think it's a good rule," Rupp said. "I knew it was coming because there's been too much reaction to this show-off stuff. I'm glad to see them do something about this thing. It doesn't belong in basketball."

Fagan said there had been a rule to prevent stalling and a lack of action for about 10 years but the new ruling strengthened it.

Under the old rule, the team behind had the responsibility of forcing the action. If an offensive team did not advance forward with the ball after 30 seconds, it was given a warning and if no action resulted after another 5 seconds, a technical foul was called.

The only change in the new ruling is that the team will be warned after only 10 seconds.

High School, Colleges Can't Dunk

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—The National Basketball Committee has come up with a defense for the dunk shot—a rule prohibiting its use in college or high school games.

The rule makers outlawed the dunk shot at the closing session of their meeting Tuesday and also strengthened a rule already on the books to prohibit stalling tactics.

Although the dunk shot is a favorite among fans, players and some coaches, one of the rule makers believes the long-range response will be favorable.

"This has been a dramatic activity," said Clifford Fagan, secretary of the national policy-making group for amateur basketball in the United States and Canada.

Ex-Illinois Stars Get Coaching Call

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN

Associated Press Sports Writer CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP)—Jim Valek and Harv Schmidt, a pair of former University of Illinois star athletes, are expected to answer the call of Alma mater Wednesday.

Valek and Schmidt will be at a press conference scheduled for Wednesday (11:30 a.m. Est) when an announcement will be made to fill the head football and basketball coaching posts.

Valek will succeed Pete Elliott as football coach and Schmidt will fill the basketball position held by Harry Combes.

Elliott, Combes and assistant basketball coach Howie Braun recently resigned in the wake of the $21,000 slush fund scandal after the Big Ten ruled the three should be fired or Illinois face suspension from the conference.

Valek, 41, is a former Illinois grid captain who played end on the 1947 Rose Bowl championship team. Valek and Gene Vance, who officially becomes Illinois' athletic director April 1, coached at LaSalle-Peru Ill. High School in the mid-1950s.

Valek was football coach and Vance, a member of Illinois' famed Whiz Kids basketball team in the 1940s, was basketball coach.

Valek went to Illinois as an assistant under Ray Elliott in 1958 and served one year under Elliott when Pete moved to Illinois from California in 1960.

Valek then shifted to Army under Dale Hall in 1961 and was retained at West Point when Paul Dietzel took the head job in 1961. When Dietzel went to South Carolina, Valek went along as offensive backfield coach.

Schmidt, 31, was captain and most valuable player on the 1957 Illinois basketball team. He has been serving as assistant to head coach Bob King at New Mexico for the last three years. Schmidt, a product of Kankakee, Ill., started his coaching career at Davenport Iowa West and compiled a two-year record of 29-15 before shifting to Moline Ill. High School where he posted a 15-8 mark in the 1963-1964 campaign.

Americans Clobber West German Team

By MARTIN ZUCKER

Associated Press Sports Writer VIENNA (AP) — "Barcelona, here I come."

The voice bellowed above the din of noisy American hockey players riding the bus back to the hotel after their last game of the 1967 World Hockey Championships.

They had just clobbered West Germany 8-3 and from the topics of conversation during the bus ride — sand, sun, bullfights, golf and other pleasures of life — it was plain they wanted to forget about icy hockey for awhile. The U.S. team, called by Coach Murray Williamson the "skating wounded" because of a string of injuries, finished with a record of three wins, three losses and one tie.

Included among the victories was a stunning 4-3 upset over Sweden in the first game.

The Americans' final position in the group standings will be determined by today's match between Canada and Sweden. If Canada wins — and it is expected to — then the U.S. team will finish fourth ahead of Sweden. If not, fifth.

Fourth would be the best showing in a world championship since a third place in 1962 at Colorado Springs, Colo.

Whether fourth or fifth, the Americans have qualified for next year's Olympic Games at Grenoble, France.

Russia clinched the title here for the fifth straight year and Soviet shooters occupied the top five places in the individual scoring race.

Look at the bidding of today's hand. You may wonder about West's raise to two hearts and North's jump to four spades. You will probably decide that West and North just liked to bid. You will agree with East's bids of five and six hearts and will feel that South was quite conservative when he only bid five spades and was fully justified in going on to six.

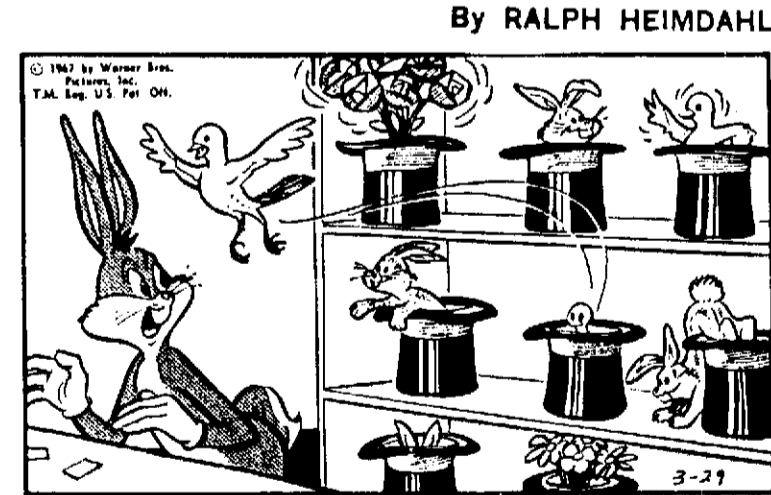

You will wonder about East's double of six spades and West's diamond lead that gives East the ruff to beat the contract. Is West clairvoyant or do East and West have signals?

The answer is that East and West were using a standard convention that has been in use more than 30 years. This convention is the Lightner slam double named after its inventor, Theodore A. Lightner of New York. The theory is that there are many times when you want your partner to make an unusual lead against an opponent's slam bid and few times when you expect to beat the slam on simple defense. Hence, the Lightner convention is that when your opponents have bid a slam that they obviously expect to make, a double calls for an unusual lead.

In this case the unusual lead is clearly a diamond. A club lead would also be unusual but East could have invited a club by bidding clubs at some stage. Therefore West knows that his partner can take the first diamond trick. He leads the diamond. East ruffs and lays down the ace of hearts.

This particular slam double was rather dangerous. East was sure of the first trick but he had to worry about his heart trick. North and South did not have many hearts between them. However, East wanted a profit and he decided that if either opponent was void of hearts they might have gone to a grand slam.

Dear Friends:

The announcement of your acquisition of the first Berkey automatic color separator machine in Arkansas is consistent with the high standards set long ago by the Hope Star.

Your publication of the first full-color picture in the United States from the larger version of the Berkey machine is a landmark in the graphic arts. Congratulations for placing Arkansas and Hope in the national printing limelight.

With my very best wishes for your continued success, I am

Dear Mr. Washburn:

We all join in extending congratulations on the outstanding letters of commendation you received from the State of Arkansas, Senators McClellan, Fulbright and Congressman Hammerschmidt. This certainly recognizes the advances you have made to the Printing Industry and specifically to the State of Arkansas and the City of Hope.

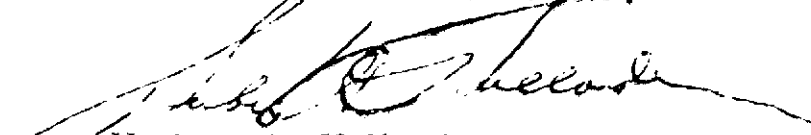

We are especially proud of the fact that the Berkey Technical Corporation, in no small way, played a part in the success story. I know that the subsequent issues will be equally outstanding.

Thanks again for sending the various leads. Our men throughout the country and especially Howard Warner, our midwest technical sales representative, has already contacted several papers and orders have been placed.

I know that in the years to come we will all be able to look back and say this is the way it really got started in Hope, Arkansas!

Dear Friends:

I have just had the pleasure of seeing the beautiful color photograph on the front page of your issue of January 28. Please accept my sincere congratulations on your acquisition of the first large model Berkey automatic four-color machine in Arkansas. It is a great step forward for journalism in our State, and we are all proud of your initiative.

The Hope Star has long been a leading journal in the State, and this is but another accomplishment of your enterprising organization. I am sure that this equipment will provide many more photographs for the enjoyment of your readers, and I look forward to future editions of the paper.

Dear Mr. Washburn:

You have certainly moved into offset with a bang! Process color a year after you start is no small achievement. I suspect you'll find the agitators are going to provide a helpful lift to your color problem.

We have scheduled Web Offset Workshops for the weeks of April 10, April 24, May 15, and June 26. We are also planning a summer series the weeks of July 10, August 14, and September 11. Hope we can involve you in one of these. We are also checking trade interest in a Web Newspaper Color Seminar in early June. We'd be interested to know whether you are a prospect for that.

Thank you again for sharing your color achievements with us. We look forward to hearing further from you.

Sincerely,
